PROSECUTOR QUILTS TRIAL ON GROUND EVIDENCE IS GONE

Convicted of Preparedness Day Bombing 16 Years Ago, Prisoner Will Get New Chance To Prove Innocence.

MANY WITNESSES ARE NOW DEAD

Main Figure Has Told Many Different Stories in Last Few Years. April 26 Is Date.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 25.—(AP)—Tom Mooney was granted a new opportunity today, after 16 years of imprisonment, to come into court and acquit himself of the 1916 Preparedness Day bombing here, in which ten persons were killed and 40 injured.

The prisoner was granted the right to a trial in court here April 26 on a heretofore unused murder indictment growing out of the bombing.

Superior Judge Louis H. Ward, in granting a motion of defense attorneys, held there could be no abridgment of the right of a defendant to a jury trial for each indictment against him.

The unused indictment, except for the names of victims involved, is the same as that upon which he was convicted and sentenced to death. The sentence was commuted to life imprisonment.

Defense attorneys demanded the additional trial on the theory that an acquittal now would strengthen Mooney's fight for pardon. He said repeatedly he would accept nothing less than a full pardon, declaring he is innocent.

Judge Ward's swift decision was followed by the equally quick withdrawal of Matthew A. Brady, district attorney, from prosecution of the case and the designation by him of the state attorney-general's office as prosecutor.

Mooney, turning from his work in San Quentin prison to hear the news, said:

"I am very happy. I felt there would be a revulsion on the part of the people against the injustice in my case and that they would insist that some way be found to right the wrong."

"This is the nearest expedient under the law."

Predicts His Acquittal.
"I am quite confident there is no question about the outcome. I will be acquitted. The evidence will be able to produce will be overwhelming."

District Attorney Brady told the court he was out of sympathy with "such a make-believe trial," and that it could be of no benefit to Mooney. Brady asserted even an acquittal would leave the prisoner's status unchanged.

"He would still be confined in state's prison under the former judgment," said Brady.

Because many of the characters in the original case have died or have gone beyond the jurisdiction of the state courts, the status of the prosecution necessarily was left in a somewhat confused state. Frank C. Osman, the state's star witness against Mooney, is dead.

Frank McDonald, another important one, has told varying stories since. Brady informed the court it

3.2 Beer May Be Sold At Ft. McPherson Here

Possibility that 3.2 beer will be sold on United States army reservations in Georgia, including Fort McPherson, appeared Saturday with an announcement from Fort Leavenworth that the sale of the beverage would be permitted in seventh corps reservations located in four states.

Major General Johnson Hagood, of Fort Omaha, commander of the seventh corps area, said: "Congress, in effect, has declared certain beverages containing not more than 3.2 alcohol are not to be regarded as intoxicants within the meaning of the eighteenth amendment."

Major General Edward L. King, commander of the fourth corps area, with headquarters here, said he would await advice from the war department before announcing whether he would permit the sale of beer in the posts under his jurisdiction.

FARM BILL MEETS STIFF OPPOSITION IN SENATE GROUP

Further Delay Seen as Committee Decides To Continue Public Hearings on Measure Next Week.

By H. HAROLD OLIVER.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—(AP)—The administration farm bill that rode so smoothly and speedily through the house skidded into a rut in the senate agriculture committee today and determined efforts by the youthful and dynamic secretary, Wallace, to budge it loose drew little encouragement from committee members.

After John A. Simpson, president of the National Farmers' Union, had again attacked the measure as "impossible," and Wallace had defended it as an emergency proposition essential to help producers of major crops the committee decided to continue public hearings next week.

This, leaders agreed, would delay a report to the senate until the latter part of the week. Some members thought the bill might not reach the senate floor even then.

Revision Favored.
Many members of the committee, including Chairman Smith, who has a substitute pending, and Senator McNary, republicans, Oregon, favor revision of the bill to simplify it, while others want to restrict its application to fewer than the nine commodities covered.

Representatives of the commodities—wheat, cotton, corn, hogs, cattle, sheep, rice, tobacco and dairy products—are to be heard next week, including producers and processors.

Wallace, making his first appearance at a public congressional committee hearing, impressed the agriculture group with his straight-forward statements and ready answers to a rapid fire of questions.

"The expert member from the Iowa corn belt asserted changing farm conditions made it essential that 'congress enact legislation granting broad and flexible powers to the administration.'"

"It must trust for a solution of the present emergency," he said, "to the exercise of sound discretion by the chief executive and those who carry out his program."

"Nothing less will suffice to meet the emergency," he said.

Georgia Again Leads Nation In Banker-Farmer Activities

For the third consecutive year Georgia leads the nation in banker-farmer activities. News has been received in Atlanta that the state has again received the highest honor which the agricultural commission of the American Bankers' Association can bestow upon any state.

Georgia's successful achievement in the annual banker-farmer contest with the other 47 states, is responsible for this added distinction. The contest was decided under the scoring system, operated by the national association's agricultural commission, placing awards to every state certain credits for its accomplishments in bettering farm conditions. Georgia was accredited 1,000 out of a possible 1,000 points, making a perfect score for the third straight year.

This is Georgia's fifth outstanding year in this competition, having placed third in 1929, second in 1930 and first during the past three years. The honor is shared this year with Oregon and North Dakota, both of these states having scored the necessary 1,000 points.

Heading the list of Georgians who has been prominent in promoting the banker-farmer work is H. Lane Young, of Atlanta, who has been chairman of the agricultural commission of the American Bankers' Association during the state's reign of agricultural supremacy. H. Grady Langford, of Milledgeville, chairman of the agricultural committee of the Georgia Bankers' Association, and J. Phil Campbell, of Athens, director of extension of the state college of agriculture.

Other leaders in the movement include W. S. Elliott, of Canton, president of the state association; Walter N. Harrison, of Lenoir, vice president of the association; Haynes McFadden, of Atlanta, secretary, and the members of the agricultural committee, who are J. M. Norman, Waycross; R. F. Fowler, Warrenton; N. L. Thompson, Canton; and B. H. McLeod, Tifton.

Points in the national contest are awarded in the following activities: 1—Attendance at the annual conference between bankers, state college workers and the representative of the American Bankers' Association; 2—Appointment of a key banker in every county for leadership in agricultural projects; 3—Expenditure by banks for agricultural and farm home improvement; 4—Attendance of bankers at state college short courses, participation in banker-farmer tours and similar activities; 5—Addresses by bankers at agricultural meetings, written

DEBT DEFAULTERS BARRED BY HULL FROM PARLEYS

Secretary Draws Definite Line Between England and France in Any Further Discussion.

By F. G. VOSBURGH.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—(AP)—A definite distinction was drawn tonight by the Roosevelt administration between discussing revision of the war debts with nations which have met their payments and with France and other countries now in default.

This stand was made known at the state department where Secretary Hull in answer to inquiries said:

"As to the governments that are in default or have deferred their payments on the intergovernmental debts I can not say at the present time that we would sit in with those governments in future discussions of their debts."

Only yesterday the British government through Ambassador Lindsay opened formal negotiations for revision of its debt, on which full payment has been made to date despite Great Britain's plea that the settlements should be changed.

The Hull statement indicating a less receptive attitude toward nations in default was made at about the same time the French government was announcing in Paris that it would begin negotiations for revision of its debt with the arrival of its new ambassador, Andre Lefevre De La Boulaye, who will take up his duties in the United States on April 12.

State department officials declined to amplify Secretary Hull's statement, nor would they indicate whether it meant that the French case would be heard only on condition that the installment of more than $19,000,000 now more than three months overdue be paid first.

The defaulting governments on December 15 were: Belgium, $2,125,000 interest; Estonia, $21,000 principal (legally postponed) and $245,370 interest; France, $19,261,432.50 interest; Hungary, $12,285 principal (legally postponed) and $28,442.25 interest; Poland, $232,000 principal (legally postponed) and $3,070,980 interest.

These sums totaling about $25,000,000 represented the first defaults on the American war debt.

What effect, if any, the administration's statement in regard to nations in default would have on the movement in France toward making its deferred payment was problematical.

Several leading French statesmen including former Premier Herriot, whose cabinet fell on the issue, have been urging that the chamber reverse its previous stand against payment.

A resolution to that effect has been formally introduced in the body.

At the same time Secretary Hull made his statement, it was made clear that the American government will be

Girl Slain by Brother Shooting at Another

Mrs. Clemie Mitchell, 30, of near Red Oak, was shot in the back and killed late Saturday night by her brother, Al Hinson, according to reports. Hinson reported the shooting at another person, it was said.

Ralph Hammond, of College Park, told police he had attended a dance at the Hinson home, which is one mile from Cook's Crossing, Saturday night. He said he went outside the house and heard a shot and that Al Hinson and the woman's father came out and attacked him with knives and sticks. He was treated at Grady hospital.

Georgia-Florida Canal Construction Expected

Roosevelt Favors Project as Part of Public Works Program To Aid Jobless; Ditch To Cross Northern Florida.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—As a part of the great public works program he is outlining for unemployment relief, President Roosevelt, expects to congress a recommendation that the long-agoed ship canal be constructed across the Florida peninsula at its narrowest point.

Designed to save ships a net of some 800 miles in round trips between eastern ports and the Gulf of Mexico, the project, capable of providing employment for 20,000 to 30,000 men at the peak of operations, is known to be receiving the serious consideration of the new chief executive.

Man Shot Dead, Brother Jailed

Ben Cooper, 26, slain in argument over "Eating Too Much," Police Told.

Angered at his brother for "eating too much supper," William Cooper, 20, of 627 Bankhead avenue, N. W., shot and killed Ben Cooper, 26, of the same address, early Sunday morning, according to police reports.

William Cooper told police that his brother came home Saturday night under the influence of whisky and that a fight developed after an argument between the brothers over the amount of food Ben Cooper ate.

The older brother attacked William with a heavy tool, it was said, and inflicted severe wounds about the face. The scuffle took place in a bedroom in their home. William obtained a pistol and shot his brother in the chest, the police reported.

William Cooper was arrested by Lieutenant W. A. Wells and County Policemen E. W. Wilson, W. A. Vinson and L. C. Clay. He is being held at Fulton tower.

The two brothers operated a fruit and confectionery stand at 1027 Bankhead avenue, which was destroyed by fire last week. The fire was caused by the brothers' carelessness, it was said.

Cooper and that the elder brother was injured over this. He cursed William and the father while eating supper. William said. Funeral arrangements for Ben Cooper will be announced by Harry G. Poole.

Taxation of 60,000 Autos at Rate of $3 or $5 Each Sought by Councilman Hastings.

Advocates of the project are confident that the survey will show this to be easily possible and in the light of the liberal attitude of the president they feel that its ultimate achievement is now in sight.

Because of the importance of the canal to Georgia and Florida, members of congress from the two states have naturally manifested a keen interest in its approval. Both Senator Duncan U. Fletcher and Senator Park Trammell, of Florida, along with Senator Walter F. George and Senator Richard B. Russell Jr., of Georgia, have kept an eye on developments, while Representative H. A. Green, dean of the Florida delegation, has held numerous conferences with President Roosevelt and government officials on the subject recently.

Altogether there are some half dozen routes suggested for the proposed canal, two of them touching Georgia and four entirely within northern Florida. The one most talked of and insisted upon by the Georgia members, of course, would start at St. Marys river, which constitutes a part of the Georgia-Florida boundary, and

Widow Acquitted CLEARED BY JURY IN MURDER TRIAL

Muscogee Jury Acquits Woman of Charge She Hired Negro To Kill Husband.

COLUMBUS, Ga., March 25.—(AP)—Mrs. Ruth Gamble was freed today of charges of complicity in her husband's murder.

A superior court jury that heard evidence in the trial for two days acquitted the middle-aged widow and mother of two children after deliberating the circumstances for about three hours. The case went to the jury at 1:40 and it returned the not guilty verdict at 5:05.

The state charged Mrs. Gamble with hiring a negro to kill her husband, promising to pay $200 for the crime when she collected his insurance. The negro has pleaded guilty to the murder.

Judge C. F. McLaughlin charged the jury only on the law of murder and of acquittal, disregarding any possibility of a verdict of manslaughter.

A. Jones Perryman, solicitor-general, closed his summation for the prosecution with a demand that the jury convict the widow of murder and accede to her request that she be given the death penalty if found guilty.

Mrs. Gamble in her unsworn statement to the jury yesterday, which constituted the sole defense, asked that she be permitted to join her husband in death if convicted.

Defense attorneys attacked the story of the chief prosecution witness, Andrew Hunt, negro, who pleaded guilty to murdering Gamble, and told his story against the widow on the stand. Sentencing of Hunt was deferred until Mrs. Gamble's case is disposed of.

The case went to the jury at 1:40 p. m., and the jurors were immediately taken to lunch, with instructions not to begin deliberations until they returned. They came back to the jury room at 3 p. m.

By depending entirely on Mrs. Gamble's statement the defense won the right to make both opening and closing arguments to the jury. T. Hicks Fort, attorney for the state, Walker H. Flournoy closed after the prosecutor had finished.

The defendant's husband, J. R. Gamble, was killed by a bullet fired from a jagged hole in the side of the house, and the resultant explosion scattered flame like the bursting of a giant bomb. Shingles and timbers hurled hundreds of yards. Despite the rain, the whole neighborhood was alerted; screams of the trapped victims were heard.

Adjoining houses caught fire. All available fire apparatus rushed to the scene, followed by ambulances and police cars.

Experts and Leaders Speed Action for Rail Legislation

WASHINGTON, March 25.—(AP)—which are now being pressed to the attention of the president.

In the background of these is the central program which was ascribed to the president when last at Warm Springs, Ga., before taking office—a program for one-man direction of all transportation agencies—rail, highway, air and water. This general idea was advocated also in this report of the transportation committee on which sat the late Calvin Coolidge.

Alfred E. Smith and other nationally-known men.

The seven-zone plan was brought up to the White House today by Frederick A. Prince, of Boston. He and Robert Jackson, secretary of the democratic national committee, talked it over with Mr. Roosevelt.

The Prince idea is to preserve the existing corporate structure of the carriers. In every zone two competing lines would function. It was suggested this would put two lines in the east, two in the southwest and three in the west.

The other, more centralized project, is being worked out by Professor A. A. Berle, of Columbia University, one of the president's advisors, in conjunction with railway executives.

All plans are being sifted through

'Big Six' Controls America 'From Baby Food Up', Huey

NEW YORK, March 25.—(AP)—Senator Huey Long, the Louisiana "Kingfish," today named his "Big Six"—men he says "control America from baby food up."

But as he waved his arms, pointed his finger, banged a table and paced the floor, he decided that maybe only three men should be placed in the list, with honorable mention to the others.

This is the way he rattled off the names:

"J. Pierpont Morgan, John D. Rockefeller—both of 'em—Andrew W. Mellon and—oh, I'll give you back the other three."

"Those three I mentioned can control everything from baby food up."

He was still pacing the floor of his hotel room.

"But wait—put George F. Baker in there, just to give him a little honorable mention. Yes, put the du Ponts in too. Might as well give them honorable mention."

Someone asked about Henry Ford. "Henry Ford? Let's see. Where is he? I'd give him a little mention, but I wouldn't put him exactly with the six."

There was hardly a national problem the senator didn't discuss as he strode about the room. And on most of them he went back to the Bible to justify his ideas.

He said "the Longs and the Wheelers can save capitalism" and declared "the Lord favored capitalism."

"The Lord's system," he said, waving his arms, "was for every man to own his own property. Every seven years all debts would be wiped out and loans would be made with that taken into consideration, and every 50 years the bugle would sound for every man to go back to his original possessions, or his family's original possessions."

Then the senator likened this to his own scheme of forbidding incomes of over $100,000 and inheritances or gifts of more than $5,000,000, and imposing capital levies running up to 100 per cent on all wealth over $100,000,000.

He said he went to the Bible for his ideas on farm relief.

"You must balance production with consumption," he shouted. "Go back to the law of Moses. Whatsoever man have overproduced a Sabbath year. Go into every community and establish warehouses. That will take care of this year's unemployment. Then when you carry your crops over a year, why, banish the crops. The land needs a rest anyway. A man could ditch and drain his land in

U. S. To Commission Ship for President

WASHINGTON, March 25.—(AP)—The former department of commerce inspection ship Sequoia, to be used by President Roosevelt for week-end trips on the Potomac river and in Chesapeake bay, was commissioned as a naval vessel today at the naval academy at Annapolis.

The yacht-like ship, which is 96 feet long, was formerly the property of William H. Dunning, of Fort Worth, Texas. It was acquired by the government in March, 1931, and was used several times by former President Hoover for fishing trips.

Lieutenant John Stuart Blue, son of the late Rear Admiral Victor Blue, chief of naval operations during a part of the World War, will command the Sequoia.

The vessel will be overhauled at the Washington navy yard before President Roosevelt uses it.

An idle year. A farmer could train himself in the arts, or go fishing."

About Hitler:

"There never has been a country that put its head down on the Jew that ever lived afterwards."

About the Mitchell bank case:

"We have a great habit here in America of going after dead lions. We didn't go after him until he was dead. Mitchell hadn't done a thing that everybody didn't know he was doing for 20 years. If they said they didn't know it, the truth ain't in 'em."

Wet Body Solicits Support From Within Ranks of Drys

NEW YORK, March 25.—(AP)—Telegramms urging dry leaders to join wet organizations in seeking "solution of the liquor problem," were sent out today by Fred G. Clark, of Cleveland, commander-in-chief of the Crusaders, an anti-prohibition organization.

They went to Mrs. Ella Boole, of the Women's Christian Temperance Union; Dr. F. Scott McBride, of the Anti-Saloon League, and Dr. Clarence True Wilson, of the Methodist board of temperance, prohibition and public morals.

Mrs. Boole at once sent a telegraphed reply in which she said the suggestion of "co-operation of the W. C. T. U. and your organization" was "absurd."

Dr. Wilson replied without delay, saying "we . . . will be glad to work with you for necessary restrictions and sobriety."

"We are ready to join in all protests against the present hysterical spirit in beer legislation and to co-operate in a non-drinking campaign among young people," he said.

In his reply he also said: "We prohibitionists have severely prophesied that promises with reference to having no saloons would be quickly broken. . . . We have declared that the principle of federal control is necessary for the protection of dry territory; that 'all advertising of beer and other liquor should be prohibited'; that 'the retail trade in liquor should be entirely divorced from the manufacturing and wholesale trade'; that 'restrictions should be placed on the sale of liquor to schools, churches, and saloons'; and that 'hours should be designed to discourage intemperate consumption.'"

New Constitution Contest Offers Free Scholarships, Vacation Trips

A contest to familiarize Georgians with their state and to foster pride in historical accomplishments will begin in the rotogravure section of the Constitution on April 16 and offers as prizes free scholarships at the University of Georgia and Wesleyan College, and six vacation trips to the state.

The contest will be open to all residents of Georgia, and prizes will be given to the winner of each of the four divisions: boys, girls, men, and women.

Planned as especially timely in view of the 200th anniversary of the state now being celebrated, the contest is strictly without any commercial angle. No money will be involved for participants and The Constitution is offering the scholarships and vacation trips in an effort to better acquaint Georgians with advantages and history of the state.

The scholarship offers will appeal especially to boys and girls. The University of Georgia was the first state university in the United States and Wesleyan College was the first chartered women's college in the world. It was especially fitting to choose institutions rich in historical background. Only undergraduates between the ages of 14 and 21 years may compete for the scholarships, though persons of any age may compete for vacation trips.

Winners of the vacation trips will be guests of The Constitution for one week this summer at the Clister Hotel, at Sea Island Beach, Hotel De Soto and the Savannah hotel at Savannah.

The contest will begin with the first page of roto pictures of Georgia on April 16 and each Sunday for 17

U. S. TO CONCENTRATE ON NEIGHBORS' TRADE Roosevelt Vigor Reflected As Congress Speeds Plans

First Efforts To Be Directed at Canada, Pan-American Nations.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—(AP)—A swift-moving drive for greater export trade in the western hemisphere is indicated by the proposed reorganization of the commerce department's bureau of foreign and domestic commerce.

Auditor sources said today that under plans practically complete, calling for a sharp curtailment of the bureau, the quest for revived international trade will be concentrated on Canada and the Pan-American nations.

The proposed set-up of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, which extended its arms throughout the world under the direction of Herbert Hoover during the time of plentiful federal money, calls for four small divisions under a director and an assistant director. At present three assistants are provided for.

These four divisions would be known as foreign tariffs, regional information, Pan-American and Canadian trade and domestic commerce.

The appropriation of the bureau for 1934 is $3,988,000 and it is understood that Secretary Rogers plans to cut the bureau to some 100 men.

The plan calls for abolition of the majority of the 69 foreign trade offices scattered throughout the world, leaving only the 14 Latin-American and Canadian offices and those in London, Berlin, Paris, Cairo, Melbourne, Rome, Vienna, Tokyo and Shanghai.

It also was learned that all but 12 of the 33 district domestic offices of the bureau would be abolished, leaving only those in federal reserve cities.

General DeSaussure Hurt in Auto Crash

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 25.—(AP)—Three Confederates who survived the bloody Civil War battle of Shiloh today nursed wounds suffered in automobile encounters.

General Charles A. Desaussure, 68, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, was hurt in a crash today.

General H. H. Lewis suffered painful injuries when the automobile in which he was riding struck a tree at Covington, Tenn., skidded and overturned. Hospital attendants said he was recovering.

John R. Newsom, 88, who as a member of the first Mississippi battalion, served under General Robert E. Lee at the time of the Confederate victory at Gettysburg, was struck by an automobile here last night. He also will recover, physicians said.

General Desaussure and his companion, Commander-in-Chief of the United Confederate Veterans, General H. H. Lewis, were riding in the automobile when it struck a tree at Covington, Tenn., skidded and overturned. Hospital attendants said he was recovering.

Receiver Is Sought For Knoxville Journal

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., March 25.—(AP)—The Knoxville Publishing Company, publishers of the Knoxville Journal, morning daily, was ordered today to appear in chancery court next Wednesday to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed to operate the paper.

The order followed the filing of a petition for a receiver by J. O. Wood, Knoxville, who claimed the company owes him $47,275.00 for selling its stock.

The bill charged that the company, as of November 30, 1932, owned and controlled approximately $101,014.45 and $25,000 in unsecured debts while assets on that date totaled $31,807.45 plus $7,000 in cash and other assets.

It was averred that "since June, 1932, down to the present time, the company has operated at a loss." Losses were listed ranging from $1,029.98 to $8,988.04 a month from June to November, 1932.

MANUSCRIPT LOST IN CHICAGO HALL

WASHINGTON, March 25.—(AP)—The original manuscript of President Roosevelt's address at Chicago in accepting the democratic nomination was delivered to him today by Colonel Edwin A. Halsey, secretary of the senate.

The manuscript disappeared during the confusion and tumult which followed its delivery after the president had flown from New York. Halsey finally found it in the possession of a court reporter's firm in Chicago, which had borrowed the speech to check it against a stenographer's notes.

The speech shows changes made in pencil by Mr. Roosevelt while he was flying to Chicago and some of the pencil work indicates they were written while the plane was bobbing through bumpy air.

Halsey, clinging to the speech today until he had delivered it to the president, told the president was "delighted" to get the manuscript, especially since his children had been particularly anxious that it be found and returned.

"I intend to see," he said, "that it isn't lost again. President Roosevelt lets it get away from him."

Halsey said the president was "delighted" to get the manuscript, especially since his children had been particularly anxious that it be found and returned.

Widow, 70, Asks $8,000 For 'Vampirish Kiss'

NEW ORLEANS, March 25.—(AP)—A 70-year-old widow asked $8,000 for a kiss administered to her in a "horrible vampirish manner" in a suit filed in civil district court here today.

The widow, Mrs. Amelia Graham, filed the petition against Elmer H. Prescott, New Orleans undertaker, alleging that she entered his establishment in an effort to sell "some mats," and that the undertaker refused to buy. Instead, he assaulted her, grabbed her and kissed her.

She started to run, but was seized again and forced to sit on the lap of the defendant, at which time she was again subjected to a "vampirish kiss," the petition continued.

Prescott refused to issue a statement.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS. WASHINGTON, March 25.—Continuing the control he has held over congress since the outset of the special session, President Roosevelt, with several major legislative enactments already to his credit, promises to produce a record for achievement not equaled by any of his predecessors since the tumultuous war period.

One after another, congress has approved his various reconstruction measures with a display of speed that has left old-timers at the capitol gasping. And by majorities which, in the light of the controversial character of some of the legislation, are fairly astounding.

No greater evidence of the new chief executive's hold on congress could be asked than the vote by which congress today passed a bill to amend the Federal Reserve Act. The bill, which was introduced by Mr. Clegg, of the Federal Reserve Board, and passed by a vote of 315 yeas to 10 nays, was recorded against the measure to 315 yeas, a majority of more than three to one.

Yet because of the bill's experimental nature, a term the president himself applied to it, there was manifestly the strongest of opposition to it in certain circles. The smaller the opposition, the more the president and his cabinet people were and are genuinely concerned over its operations.

The state is expected to devote more time to consideration of the measure and perhaps revise it somewhat, but no one has any serious doubt at the moment of its early passage. It is a bill that is entirely acceptable to the White House.

Prior to the farm bill vote in the house, both chambers had passed the administration's sweeping emergency bank legislation, the general economy bill against which a powerful protest had been raised by veterans' organizations throughout the country, the equally controversial beer bill, and by way of good measure, an important amendment to the banking legislation relating to stock banks. Finally, the house has just passed a bill legalizing the manufacture and sale of 3.2 beer in the District of Columbia.

Ordinarily it might have taken days and even weeks to get any one of these measures through. Certainly this would have been true of such broad controversial legislation as the economy bill and the Volstead act amendment. Committees of the house and senate would have spent weeks perhaps on hearings alone, and this would have been true of the farm bill, too. Yet all of them, save the farm program, have been enacted into law in the comparatively brief space of a few days.

For example, it is doubtful if he ever would permit the same to be made for Mr. Hoover or some of his associates of inviting to the White House a selected group of senators who are members of the senate committee and overlook someone of the importance of Senator Johnson. That happened early in the Hoover administration when committee of the foreign relations committee of the White House function and Senator Johnson never quite forgave the former president for the apparent slight.

Roosevelt Stands as Audience At Party for Granddaughter

By BESS FURMAN. WASHINGTON, March 25.—(AP)—None other than President Roosevelt himself today stood as an appreciative and grandfathersly audience as little "Sis"ie, daughter of the president, celebrated her sixth birthday. The party was held at the White House, and the president and Mrs. Roosevelt were present.

The birthday girl, who is 6 years old, was the center of attention. She was surrounded by her family and friends, and the president and Mrs. Roosevelt were present.

And Chief Usher Irvin Hoover, who has been in the White House more than 40 years, replied that he could remember ever having seen just such a children's party around that table in the private dining room.

"Sis"ie handed each guest a toy with which to play on the sick party floor of the huge east room. Most of the toys were on wheels—rabbits, horses with nodding heads, clown dolls and many other devices, and the children hoped, skipped and slid to their hearts' content with the toys rolling after.

Several of the children were so young as to be still crawling, and when they were placed in the front row of a birthday picture surrounded their hostess, they crawled off in all directions over the slipper floor and had to be brought back by their mothers.

"Sis"ie's little brother, Curtis Roosevelt, aged 2-1/2, in little blue trousers and white waist, was the center of attention.

Slump Sees F. D. R. Prosperity Bringer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, March 25.—(AP)—President Roosevelt will restore prosperity to the United States within six months, C. Bascom Slump, secretary to the president during the Coolidge administration, predicted in an interview here today.

"President Roosevelt is striking at the heart of the nation's and the world's ills," Slump declared. "The nation has been suffering from low commodity prices and high debts, and the president is correcting that condition."

Slump personally delivered his declaration to the president. He was the Roosevelt family manager in the national convention.

PUBLISHER'S MARRIAGE ANNULMENT SOUGHT

MIAMI, Fla., March 25.—(AP)—A recommendation that the marriage of Fremont Payne, 74-year-old retired publisher to Aileen Kello, 32, of Nashville, Tenn., on February 1, 1930, be annulled was made to circuit court today by H. E. Hyles, master in chancery.

Payne died February 23, 1932, in a hospital here, and relatives sought an order dissolving his marriage by annulment on the grounds that Payne was incompetent at the time of his marriage and had signed a will the day he was married, leaving his entire estate valued at $200,000 to his wife.

Officials said the recommendation of annulment, if followed by the court, would eliminate Miss Kello from any share in the estate.

SOLON'S SON FOUND SHOT DEAD IN HOME

CHILHOWIE, Va., March 25.—(AP)—J. Tyler Frazier Jr., member of the Virginia legislature from Smyth county, was found shot to death in the bath room of his home today. A sawed-off shotgun was near the body.

Members of the family said he had been in declining health for several months and in a highly nervous state for several days.

Two Californians Dead From Poison

ALAMEDA, Cal., March 25.—(AP)—A burning light in a quiet bungalow apartment revealed the poison-deaths of Stanley H. Rich, former San Francisco attorney, and his stenographer, Mrs. Agnes MacNeil.

The light had burned two days before investigators discovered the bodies. Rich's wife, Mrs. Hilda Rich, of Oakland, made the identification, then collapsed, saying her husband had told her he was going to Colorado on a business trip.

The widow, Mrs. Amelia Graham, filed the petition against Elmer H. Prescott, New Orleans undertaker, alleging that she entered his establishment in an effort to sell "some mats," and that the undertaker refused to buy. Instead, he assaulted her, grabbed her and kissed her.

She started to run, but was seized again and forced to sit on the lap of the defendant, at which time she was again subjected to a "vampirish kiss," the petition continued.

Scottish Rite Hospital To Benefit From Big Air Show on April 16

Plans for one of the biggest air shows ever held in the south, to be presented April 16 at the Atlanta airport for the benefit of the Scottish Rite hospital for Crippled Children, were announced Saturday by the oriental band of Yaarab temple, sponsoring the event.

Many of the country's outstanding speed, exhibition and stunt pilots are planning to attend, the Shriners announced, and the tentative program includes a series of interesting events.

Heading the list of famous flyers is Doug Davis, who is to fly for the benefit of the crippled children in a speed race and a stunting exhibition. Johnny Livingston, of Aurora, Ill., a featured performer at the national races, plans to attend, as does Art Davis, of Lansing, Mich., a stunt and racing pilot. Clem Sohn, also of Lansing, who won five first places in parachute events at the last national air show, will be one of the jumpers at the local meet.

Beeler Blevins and George Shealy, both well known to Atlanta flying enthusiasts, also have a place on the program, which includes speed races, formation flying, "dog fighting" and numerous other events.

Arrangements for the air show are in the hands of an executive committee of the oriental band, composed of Dr. Charles A. Wilson, chairman; Bradford Byrd, James W. Battle, R. D. Bame and Dan Bridges, and the ticket sale was launched Saturday. Headquarters of the show were opened in the Shrine mosque, next to the Fox theater lobby.

The orchestra and Glee Club have recently returned from a two weeks' concert tour which took them to a number of cities in Florida and the southern part of Georgia. At all their concerts they received a very cordial welcome. ## F. D. R.'S PROGRAM WILL BE RUSHED Rainey Believes Depression Will End When Plans Are Enacted.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—(AP)—Complete enactment of President Roosevelt's program by June is the aim of Speaker Rainey, who declared his belief today that "the depression will end when that is accomplished." Success so far, the speaker told newspapermen at a conference, has been "due to tremendous—most unanimous—popular support." "If the people will continue to support the president, I, at least, will do everything I can to see that his plans become law," Rainey added. The program of things yet to be done, he said, includes: Unemployment relief through reforestation and a permanent and broad plan yet to be completed, along with additional direct relief for the states. Legislation to provide some kind of home and farm mortgage reorganizations. In order that house democrats may continue to work with the president, Rainey and the other party leaders have definitely discarded the practice of rushing legislation through. Today, numbers of them talked with some new members who had shown signs of objecting to a continuation of past practices. Because of the new order of things, Rainey said, "we can't keep on moving as fast as we have been." He added: "And since we can't, it likely will be impossible for us to adjourn congress by the first of May as we had contemplated." Rainey said he expected a farm mortgage reorganization from the president next week, to be followed shortly by home mortgage and railroad reorganization messages. While congress is acting, the state department "through our new secretary will be trying to get some tariff agreements," he explained, adding: "Our success in that direction depends upon the economic conference. We can't cut down our tariff walls now, for we would be flooded by imports from expatriate American factories—plants that have been forced to go to other countries to get over retaliatory tariff walls."

RESERVE OFFICERS PLEDGE SUPPORT TO NEW PRESIDENT

Pledging co-operation with the plans of President Roosevelt, members of the Fifth District chapter, Reserve Officers' Association of the United States, at their last meeting unanimously adopted a resolution answering any call as an organization for service to the nation in military or civil status. Following the adoption of the resolution, three medals were presented for activity in a membership campaign, to Captain George M. Brooks, Captain Walter G. Smith and Major J. W. Weinschenk. The meeting was the last at which the retiring president presided and new officers will take office on April 6. New officers are First Lieutenant T. Clinton Huguley, president, and Lieutenant Colonel A. G. Conoley, vice president.

$10,000 Is Three-Day Total In Georgia Hall Campaign

With one county over the top with its quota, others nearing their goal and with a total of more than $10,000 paid and subscribed to the fund to erect Georgia Hall at Warm Springs Foundation, leaders in the movement were jubilant Saturday night at the close of the third day of the drive to raise $100,000 to honor President Franklin D. Roosevelt and demonstrate Georgia's affection for the president and the patients he befriended. Although the citizens of Meriwether county, where the foundation is located, had a quota of $1,000, that sum was subscribed by nearly $400 and solicitors "were still going strong," according to Cason J. Callaway, chairman of the drive. Cator Woodford, vice chairman and head of the Atlanta committee, estimated the $10,000 in definite pledges and cash received. Both Mr. Callaway and Mr. Woodford pointed out that while three days of last week were spent in soliciting subscriptions, that this week was most important and that the hopes were held that the fund would be completed within a few days. Patients at the foundation were reported among the most liberal subscribers. Among the larger Atlanta gifts Saturday was an amount of $250 donated by employees of the Retail Credit Company. Other concerns were canvassing employees in Atlanta. Commenting on the success of the drive so far, Mr. Callaway said he wished to express his appreciation for the co-operation of the citizens. "We are doing this," he said, "not for Roosevelt, the president, but for Roosevelt the man and our friend and part-time citizen."

FLORIDA BOUND.

When your sleepy eyes rest upon this passage some dozen or more Atlanta bridge players will be well on their way toward Jacksonville, the Florida state and southeastern bridge championships and what fame, glory and silverware they can win in above mentioned events. Allowing full credit for the vicissitudes of the depressed times and that intangible quality in human nature (most eloquently and frequently expressed by the gentle sex) known as change of mind, the following players from this city should be well on their southward journey while you are having your toast and coffee: Mrs. Humphrey Wagar, Mrs. J. T. Daniel, Mrs. Aline Phelan, Mrs. Ed Nix, Miss Peggy Porter, Mrs. Gladys Peabody, Ed Jarvis, John Tyner, Bob Ames, Bill Dickey, Fred Shaefer, Billy Barrett, Hudson Edwards, Harold Dillon and Whitner Cary. To this list add Miss Anne Barrett, of Augusta; Fred Levy, of Montgomery, and John Hardisty, of Miami. These last three are semi-Atlanta players, and will play on teams from the Gate City. As doubtful starters add Ed Nix and Larry Caudill. Both want to go, but are still undecided. At this writing the Atlanta Bridge Club players have not decided on the personnel of the two or more teams which will be formed from that club's entry list. Two teams will play under the banner of the Cavendish Club. The first is a combination Atlanta-Augusta outfit composed of Miss Anne Barrett and Billy Barrett, of the latter city, and Harold Dillon, Fred Shaefer and Bill Dickey, from Atlanta. The other quartet will be composed of Mrs. Humphrey Wagar, Fred Levy, John Hardisty and Whitner Cary. There are two team-of-four events down for decision—the Florida State and Southeastern. The teams mentioned will compete in both.

PURELY LOCAL.

It is with deep regret and a feeling of untold sorrow that I record the following unhappy fact. Some weeks ago you who read these rambling thoughts will recall that I painted in what I was compelled to believe, most glowing colors the brilliant achievement of a quiet captain by Mrs. Pearl Williamson in a team-of-four tournament. It was a most remarkable performance and deserved all the praise I could give. I could not find an epitaph of Mrs. Williamson. Would that she had decided to rest on her laurels and not seek further glory. Had she done so this tale would not have to be recorded. But like all conquerors she looked about for other sectors to bring to her domain. Result—this lady headed another team in a recent tournament and that team won but three boards out of a total of 32. Jack Oakhurst and Hudson Edwards, a still figuring what percentage game was turned in. It might be mentioned in passing that neither Mr. Oakhurst or Mr. Edwards were members of the above mentioned team.

Looks like the star of the week is Sidney Smith. The fine player took part in three events during that span and flashed past the judges' stand three times in front. He started off his winning streak by being a member of the Cavendish team of four composed of Mrs. Humphrey Wagar, Mrs. E. E. David, Whitner Cary and himself which defeated a strong four-man team from the Atlanta Bridge Club composed of Bob Ames, Ed Nix, John Tyner and Joe David. He next galloped to victory in the Cavendish individual and won the week's performance by winning the Cavendish pair tournament. Add to these achievements the fact that, inspired with Mrs. David, he came second in the Cavendish pair of the preceding week.

Mrs. Emma McDaniel announces that her team-of-four tournament will be changed from Saturday afternoon to Friday evening of each week.

HIGH MORTALITY RATE SHOWN FOR ATLANTA

Atlanta experienced a high mortality rate during the week ending March 18, according to the vital statistics department report, which showed that 83 persons died during the week, setting a death rate of 15.0. The number of white deaths was 41, while the negro death list numbered 42, setting the white rate at 11.2 and the negro rate at 22.3. The report also showed the white infant mortality was high. Other southern cities showing a high mortality rate were Baltimore, El Paso, Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, Knoxville, Memphis, Nashville, New Orleans, Richmond, Tampa and Miami.

CHILD LABOR ISSUE WILL BE REVIVED

"Lost" Amendment, Ratified by Three States, Is Again in Limelight.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—(AP)—A "lost" constitutional amendment has come back to life, competing in a small way with the proposal for repeal of the 18th amendment. The revived one is the plan to outlaw exploitation of child labor, proposed by congress nine years ago, approved until this year by six states, rejected by 26.

It was an outcast step-child, virtually abandoned despite the fact that congress placed no time limit for its ratification, because it seemed impossible to swing back enough states to make up the necessary 30.

Then surprisingly this year Oregon ratified, and Washington and North Dakota. The latter had been a rejector.

This week Ohio's legislature ratified, and then the supporters of the lost amendment sat up in earnest. The foes of child labor, the steady workers against sweatshop exploitation of minors, give much of the credit for revived interest in their amendment to Frances Perkins.

With others she, who is now secretary of labor, reported to a child labor conference in Washington last November a return of reviving conditions of employment in many industrial sections.

Then, too, many believe unemployment has so heightened the effect of the competition of youthful labor with that of family breadwinners as to heighten social consciousness of conditions tolerated in more prosperous times.

Another agency getting credit is the American Federation of Labor, which led the fight for the amendment through congress.

All the leagues, federations, conferences and associations working for it, are looking next to Minnesota. Its house has passed a ratifying resolution, it is up to the senate. Ratification resolutions are pending in Alabama, Iowa, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Kansas, Wyoming and Michigan. One is being studied in Tennessee. Previous rejecting states are in that list.

Besides this season's four, ratifying states are Arkansas, 1924; Arizona, California and Wisconsin, 1925; Montana, 1927; Colorado, 1931.

Donors were requested to send cash or checks payable to the treasurer, Georgia Hall committee, at 85 Poplar street, Atlanta. A coupon is printed in this issue of The Constitution which contributors may clip, fill out and use to accompany their cash or checks.

Film To Be Shown Today

5-Year Census of Atlanta, Fulton School Children To Open Monday

Enumeration of Atlanta and Fulton county children of school age for the state census on which is based allocations to school systems from the common school fund will begin Monday morning. The census will include all children 6 to 18 years of age, or those born after June 30, 1914, or before July 1, 1927. City and county school officials emphasized the importance of not missing a single child, as each one left out of the census will cost the school systems the loss of $20 to $25 from state funds over the five-year period until the next census. City and county school departments appealed for co-operation of parents in listing the children by asking that parents try to remain at home, in so far as possible, until the enumerator has listed their children, or to leave the information with a next door neighbor for the enumerator. The city of Atlanta will be divided into 48 sections, with one to three enumerators in each section. The division in the county will be by militia districts, with one enumerator to the district. The work is expected to be complete within two weeks. The 1928 school census showed totals of 16,256 for Fulton county, 3,135 for old Campbell, 1,808 for old Milton and 442 for Roswell district, a grand total of 21,731. The Atlanta census was 30,491. The Fulton county enumerators are as follows: Adamsville, Mrs. Homer Lyle; Blackhall, R. E. Steed; Bryants, Mrs. H. P. Derry; Buckhead, Fred C. Disbro; Center Hill, L. M. McTriff; College Park, Mrs. Charles Stripling; Collins, J. A. Grumling; Cooks, D. L. Herndon; East Point, A. H. Cochran; Grogans, Zelma Pitts; Hapeville, E. M. Schenck; Oak Grove, Emma Nance; Peachtree, Roy C. Morrison; Tooles, J. S. Gibson; South Bend, W. L. Stokes. VALDOSTA SURVEY
REVEALS UPSWING FOR ALL BUSINESS

Leaders in Every Line Report Better Trade and Increased Confidence
Since Bank Holiday.

VALDOSTA, Ga., March 25.—Business in all lines shows a strong tone of revival in Valdosta, according to leaders, and a fair amount of activity in paint-up and repair work, which is giving employment to many.

In the retail hardware line a representative states that seasonal sales now are greater in volume than for the past two years. Sales are made, however, at prices reduced from previous seasons, he notes, affecting the volume in dollars and cents.

Bank deposits since the end of the bank holiday show a decided gain, indicating a widespread increase in general business and financial confidence over the past year or more.

A representative property owner, having both residential and business property for rent, expresses the belief that the low ebb has been passed and that there will be a steady curve upward with tenants better able to meet obligations.

In ready-to-wear business circles leading dealers say their volume of trade, representing units of merchandise being sold, is greater than at any time the present year. They observe that while buying is on a conservative scale, it is with much more freedom than has been exhibited for many months.

Lumber manufacturing is showing some signs of revival, with slightly increased demands and an upward turn in prices. One plant of considerable size, after being closed down for some time, is again cutting.

Among merchants handling goods used mainly by farmers there is an improved business condition, approximately $40,000 in cash from the crop production fund of the government having already been received by local county growers.

Cotton is selling at an average of 1 cent a pound since the bank holiday and some of the crop is being moved from warehouses where it has been stored. The textile plant here is operating with day and night shifts.

Wholesale grocery concerns report a moderate improvement in orders, as well as in collections, with a better feeling existing among retailers.

Building permits show a slight increase, while plans are being formed for a more extensive construction program through the remainder of the spring and early summer.

Conditions in naval stores production are regarded as much better, with prices ranging upward slightly since the bank holiday. There will be an increase in new "crops" this spring; a "crop" meaning 10,000 cubs. While some of the new "crops" are taking the place of trees being allowed to rest, yet it involves some additional expenditure to start new "crops," which adds to the volume of money in circulation.

BANK AT CHATSWORTH

The former president, who has been with the bank for 17 years, was succeeded by Robert E. Chambers.

Both the new president and cashier are young men of unusual ability. Mr. Foster is the county superintendent of schools and Mr. Chambers is now filling his second year as clerk of the superior court of Murray county.

Bessie Tift Girls Most Beautiful, Says Mississippi Official
After 9 Years of Touring 47 States, Canada and Old Mexico

Glee Club of Bessie Tift College, at Forsyth, Ga., typical of the girls at that institution who are, according to Lieutenant Governor Murphree, of Mississippi, the most beautiful on the continent of North America.

By CRADDOCK GOINS.
"I love them for their beauty,
Which cheers the social heart,
And for their rosy girls—
The fairest on the earth!"

JACKSON, Miss., March 25.—So sang the silver-tongued Sidney Lanier, of his Red Old Hills of Georgia, in the long ago.

A resounding echo comes today in the verdict of an official who has traveled more than 65,000 miles, greater than two and a half times the distance around the world, before placing the laurel for maidenly comeliness upon the fair heads of Georgia's daughters.

The official is Lieutenant Governor Dennis Murphree. As head of the famous "Know Mississippi Better" trains, which annually take transcontinental trips, sometimes venturing into Canada and Mexico, Murphree is perhaps the best qualified man in the nation to speak on the relative charms of North American ladies.

Murphree is lieutenant-governor of Mississippi, his native state. On his train he has visited 47 states in America, five provinces in Canada, and three states in Old Mexico to be feted and flattered by the choicest beauties of the New World.

For nine years he has conducted these trips.

Now he places Georgia girls at the top of the pulchritude parade.

This came the other day when he was reminiscing about his various experiences in travels that have made him perhaps the most widely known man ever to hold public office in the south—the friend of our governors, mayors, janitors, policemen, Indian guides, preachers, Mormons, Catholics, Baptists, Jews (or have you anything else to suggest?) than any other good-will crusader America ever had.

"I rank Eau Claire, Wisconsin, as the friendliest city I have ever seen, and a Mormon, Heber J. Grant, of Salt Lake City, head of that church, as the friendliest man I ever met," said Murphree.

"But without a doubt the prettiest girls that ever came to our train in nine years of wanderings were the Bessie Tift College girls when we visited Forsyth a few years ago."

Unaffected Beauty.
"I never saw more simple, genuine, artless and unaffected beauty even in Mexico, so famed for its beautiful women of the Old World types, nor in Canada, where they have a gorgeous type of feminine attractiveness glorifying 'Our Lady of the Snows.'"

"There was not just one or two pretty girls, as we often noticed at various stops, but it seemed that every one of the scores of young women who swarmed around our train at Forsyth were cast in a pattern of amazing loveliness."

"We lingered at Forsyth for a long time, but I wish that we could have seen more of the college, whose beautiful buildings were partly visible from the train."

"Mississippi has placed much store upon education of young women, having at Columbus, Miss., the Mississippi State College for Women, one of the most advanced in the country."

"We long have admired the splendid interest Georgia takes in education of its women. They evidently must have splendid beauty courses in that state also."

Expedition Annually.
It was in 1925 that Murphree launched the idea of a special excursion over the continent from his native state every year. Since that time he has not missed a year in leading such an expedition. At this moment he is planning his tenth excursion.

"I began the trips with the idea of selling other people on the charms of southern life and in particular on the advantages of Mississippi," he said.

"They at least have served the purpose of selling me upon southern life. I have seen many beautiful places. I think the beauties of southern life are unsurpassed. I have never seen anywhere beaches finer than those of the Mississippi Gulf coast or of Tybee, in Georgia, or Isle of Palm, off the coast of Charleston."

"I think we have a variety of beautiful scenery in the southern states, the Mississippi river in my state, the oaks of Natchez, the trees growing down to the water level at Biloxi, Gulfport and Bay St. Louis, the beautiful hills of Georgia, the Great Smoky mountains of Tennessee, the Blue Ridge of Virginia—all of these things are treasure stores of beauty that southerners do not readily appreciate as they should."

"I think the Green Mountains of Vermont and the White Mountains of New Hampshire are the most beautiful mountains I have ever seen."

Canada's Lakes.
"Canada has the prettiest lakes I have ever witnessed. Old Mexico's mysterious pyramids, built 13,000 years ago by a race with a civilization older than the history of the Indians—these pyramids are certainly the most interesting sights I have ever witnessed."

"I have floated on three rivers that flow north in Canada, emptying into the Arctic sea, and I think the St. Lawrence is one of the most awe-inspiring sights I have ever known."

The rivers flowing north are the only rivers of this kind in North America. Franklin D. Roosevelt is the most interesting man Murphree has ever met, he says. Next to him he ranks Ortiz Rubio, president of Mexico, who received him at Mexico's famous "castle of emperors," which serves as the "White House" of the Mexican nation in the summer months.

In Canada the Murphree train in 1931 visited the famous Canadian National Exposition, with 200,000 other visitors from all parts of that domain, an event generally regarded as the most largely attended of any exposition held in North America annually.

Canadians Friendly.
"I place Canadians as being friendly and more in sympathy with the people of the South than are the people of any other section in which I have traveled," he said.

"Perhaps it is because we are all of the same common racial strain, but we certainly found much mutual liking and admiration among our Canadian hosts on every visit."

Murphree is serving his second term as lieutenant-governor of Mississippi. He filled the unexpired term of governor when the late Henry L. Whitfield died in 1927. He has spent more than 20 years in public life in his state.

Church Bells To Ring
With Fire Horses Gone
AUGUSTA, Ga., March 25.—(P)—Time has marched on, leaving fire horses behind, and therein arises the promise that the bells of Bethany church will toll again.

Forty-five years ago the chimes were silenced by orders of city council because the churches in a nearby fire station habitually mistook their ringing for alarms and ran under the harness racks.

Firemen tried diligently to teach them the difference between fire bells and church bells but never succeeded. Finally the men grew weary of having their bells break out of their stalls with every church service and the council came to their relief.

Now there is not a fire horse left in Augusta and authorities are considering the church's petition that the order be revoked.

MAILMAN KILLED
BY MYSTERY SHOT

WASHINGTON, Ga., March 25.—(P)—William Acree, 35, a rural mail carrier, died in a hospital here last night from wounds suffered when he was shot and clubbed near Union Point, in Greene county, Thursday.

Acree told hospital attaches here, where he was brought after being found by the side of the road near a mail box fatally wounded, that a shot was fired apparently from ambush as he saw one. He said his assailant then beat him over the head with the gun.

Officers are seeking clues as to his assailant.

General services for the former air corps pilot will be held from the First Methodist church of Athens with the Rev. Lester Rumble, pastor, officiating. A military escort from the University of Georgia, R. O. T. C., American Legion and Reserve Officers' Association will also attend the rites.

In the funeral procession will be a troop of cavalry and two companies of infantry from the University of Georgia, the American Legion, the Order of DeMolay, the coaching staff of the university, a detachment from the reserve officers' corps here, Dr. S. V. Sanford, president of the university, and other officials of the university and the Athens High school.

Active pallbearers will be classmates of Lieutenant Hamilton at the University. They are Vernon (Catfish) Smith, Lawrence H. Costa, Lawrence J. Costa, Joe L. Costa, Lieutenant Mal Stephenson Jr., Chaplain Mathews, Milton (Red) Leathers and John Burns.

OverSeas

By BYRON DARTON.
Associated Press Cable Editor.

NEW YORK, March 25.—(AP)—While Italian fascism celebrated its 14th anniversary this week the leader of national socialism in Germany was formally invested with all the power he needs to make him a dictator.

For the next four years Germany is to be governed by his cabinet, which will proclaim the laws, decree the budget, make treaties with foreign powers and disregard the constitution as it sees fit. These powers were voted by the Nazi-controlled Reichstag.

Adolf Hitler heads the cabinet and behind him are his disciplined storm troopers, the national socialist party, the army, the police, and the machinery of government administration from national to village, over which he has quickly gained control.

Premier Mussolini, in a message to his people in connection with the 14th anniversary of fascism's birth, spoke of the spread of the doctrine for which he stands.

"In this, the 11th year of our regime, our orders of the day go beyond our frontiers, our doctrine henceforth is universal, our work is already a symbol for us for centuries to come," he said.

"Thus fascist Italy ascends toward the summit of her new history and can dispense her ancient and modern wisdom to other peoples and herald the period of fascist civilization."

In the Europe of today the most fertile field for the possible further spread of fascism appears to be Austria. There a national socialist movement, closely allied with the Hitlerites of Germany, already is growing rapidly. Moreover, the parliamentary and ministerial history of Austria in the last year has been considerably confused—sufficiently so to make the Austrian Nazi leaders express confidence that events are playing into their hands.

With Italy, Germany and Austria fascist, there would be a lineup approximating that of the period before the war when the triple alliance united, in theory at least, the strong nations of central Europe.

For Austria and Germany this triple alliance scarcely was valuable. At the beginning of the war Italian public opinion was opposed to siding with Austria. August 3, 1914, the Italian government declared neutrality, explaining that Austria had failed to co-operate with Italy before the war for peace or to make adequate military preparations, and that Italy was not bound by the alliance to participate in an aggressive policy.

Italy's neutrality lasted until May 24, 1915, when war was declared against Austria and diplomatic relations with Germany were broken off. Recent events in middle Europe have caused some political observers abroad to consider the possibility of the formation of a fascist bloc of nations. Ostensibly this question was at least touched upon when Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, of Great Britain, conferred with Premier Mussolini in Rome last week-end.

The theory was that Mr. MacDonald might impel the Italian premier to use his influence on Germany's fascist chancellor in the interests of peace.

The future will have to determine whether any sort of approximate unity would result from fascist administrations in Italy, Germany, and Austria.

ECONOMIST HITS MARKETING COSTS

Closer Co-ordination of Transportation Urged To Aid Agriculture.

URBANA, Ill., March 25.—(AP)—Closer co-ordination of highway, rail and water transportation to facilitate reductions in farmers' marketing costs is advocated by R. W. Bartlett, agricultural economist at the University of Illinois.

Further and drastic declines in marketing costs must be achieved, he contends, if agriculture's economic recovery is to be speeded.

"During the last three years there has been a decline of more than $6,000,000,000 in farmers' gross income, but nothing like a comparable decrease in the cost of marketing those products," Bartlett said.

"With freight rates, for example, still more than 50 per cent above war levels and farm prices greatly depressed, cost of transportation by rail has taken a much increased proportion of what farmers receive for their products."

"Freight charges amounted to 12 per cent of what farmers received for wheat in 1922 and 26 per cent in 1932."

"An increasing proportion of shipments of fruits, vegetables, live stock, milk and grain, for instance, have been handled on the highways at lower cost than is possible with rail transportation."

"Reductions in transportation costs would be facilitated by closer co-ordination of highway, rail and water transportation."

High marketing costs and low consumer incomes, Bartlett says, have been largely responsible for a loss of about 25 per cent in fluid milk sales during the last three years. He traces this drop principally to high marketing costs.

"The retail price of milk in 1932 for 51 cities in the United States averaged 78 per cent of that for 1922," he said. "While the retail price of all

TRADE AGREEMENT WITH BRAZIL URGED BY U. S. INTERESTS

Movement for Reciprocal Pact Gains Momentum Following Inauguration of Roosevelt.

By PAUL SANDERS.
RIO DE JANEIRO, March 25.—(AP)—A movement for a reciprocal trade agreement between the United States and Brazil, fostered by American businessmen here, has gathered momentum with the inauguration of President Roosevelt.

With trade reciprocity, the American Chamber of Commerce in Brazil desires more of an "even break" for exchange remittances.

All Latin America has been looking forward with interest to Washington tariff developments under the new administration, hoping for revisions which would permit an expansion of inter-American trade.

In the view of American businessmen here, Uncle Sam holds unusual bargaining power with regard to Brazil. Products of the two countries do not clash. Brazil has a large favorable trade balance with the United States, and American companies here, long handicapped by high Brazilian tariffs and exchange restrictions, have been mustering ammunition for several months.

Immediate Action Asked.

They are urging that the present is the time for Washington to make a trade bargain with Brazil, because the Brazilian tariffs are being revised and Minister of Finance Oswaldo Aranha has expressed himself as favorable to the idea of reciprocity.

The United States is Brazil's best customer, purchasing about 50 per cent of Brazilian exports, and the trade ratio in favor of Brazil is about 3-to-1. Most Brazilian products, such as coffee, babassu and cacao, enter the United States duty free.

American products, although given most favored-nation treatment in Brazil, carry a considerable tariff burden and must compete with countries which have depreciated currencies.

The American businessmen here desire that Brazil remove duties from enough American products to reciprocate at least partially for the advantages which Brazil holds in the United States.

Brazil Would Welcome Deal.

The American companies also desire to remit home a share of American products, such as automobiles, which with the amount Brazil gets from the United States, Brazil at present, however, simply lacks the exchange and has to import it from the United States.

Meeting a six-million-pound credit left uncovered by deposed Washington Luis government and finding coverage to fulfill funding agreements has so far prevented the government from easing its tight monopoly of exchange.

An ameliorative tendency was set back during the civil war, but summer, which necessitated heavy purchases of foreign arms, munitions and airplanes, taking a big chunk of exchange which, under peaceful circumstances, might have been diverted to regular trade channels.

Paper Reveals Move For Greek Monarchy

ATHENS, Greece, March 25.—(AP)—The newspaper Patris, organ of the Venizelos party, said today that it had verified reports that Colonel Levidis, former chief of staff of King George II, is here to discuss the possibility of restoring the monarchy.

The reports were denied in authoritative quarters recently when Colonel Levidis arrived in Athens.

George II of Greece, who succeeded his father King Constantine, after the abdication in 1922, reigned only a year before he was forced to leave Greece. He has been living in exile ever since.

Recently it was reported that restoration of the monarchy in Greece was discussed at a conference between King George II, and King Alexander, of Yugoslavia.

SOSNOWIEC, Poland, March 25.—(AP)—A strike of 700 coal miners who remained underground for six days at Klimontow, to prevent employers from flooding the shafts and putting them out of work, was at an end today.

Promised jobs by the governor of Kielce, the strikers came out of the pits last night shouting cheers for the government. For four days the strikers had refused to take any food.

The mine owners agreed not to dismantle the shafts and announced the shutdown would be only temporary.

FACTS CONCERNING 'CAVE-MAN' KING FOUND IN FRANCE

Discoveries Confirm Writings of Caesar, Necessitate Change of Records Regarding Gergovia.

By THOMAS COPE.
PARIS, March 25.—(UP)—Discovery of hitherto unknown facts concerning the ancient metropolis of the Gauls—the city of Gergovia, where the mighty Vercingetorix ruled as a "cave-man" king—was reported today by archaeologists, who believe they have discovered relics without parallel in modern France.

Vercingetorix, the "first king" of France, was a cave man in the best sense of the word, the scientists reported from ruins which have been found near Clermont Ferrand. Some of their discoveries confirm the writings of Caesar and necessitate changes in the records regarding the location and nature of Gergovia.

The location definitely has been fixed as on a desolate plateau known as "The Hills," rather than four miles south of Clermont Ferrand, which, in fact, bears the appellation of Gergovia.

The red-headed barbarian king who defeated the mighty legions of Julius Caesar lived in a stone hut built in the shape of an igloo.

Followers 80,000 Strong.

His followers were 80,000 strong, living in similar stone huts on the sparse, shrub-covered plateau which is now so desolate that goats graze and children are warned not to wander there for fear of "hobgoblins."

Each hut had a large opening serving as a door and a small one for the double purpose of window and loophole.

In each hut the residents used pottery and weapons which have now been found by modern archaeologists.

These discoveries were possible as the result of a chance venture of Maurice Busset, noted painter and conservator of the Clermont Ferrand museum into "The Hills" where Caesar's forces were defeated in 52 B. C.

Busset knows and loves this country of Auvergne and on one of his excursions he penetrated deep into "The Hills" until he came upon what appeared to be the ruins of a shepherd's hut. But on investigation he found it was something far more important. He forgot about lunch and worked desperately until midnight.

He returned down the hills almost certain that he had made a sensational discovery.

Kept Discovery Secret.

But he kept his discovery a comparative secret while he recruited experts to the scene to verify that this was the site of the ancient city. They found many stone huts and—more important—the remains of a long fortified wall which archaeologists and historians are cataloging and using to reconstruct the life of the time in this city, believed to have been the first highly organized community of the period.

They say the discoveries shed an entirely new light on the early conquests of the French barbarians.

INLAND WATERWAYS EXTENSION IS SOUGHT

WASHINGTON, March 25.—(AP)—Whitening bill will blow on the Illinois waterway within a few months if the administration carries out a recommendation to extend the waterway to General Thomas G. Ashburn, chairman of the Inland Waterways Corporation.

A plan to extend the activities of the government-controlled operations on the inland waterways from the Mississippi to Chicago by June 15, will be submitted to Secretary Dern, of the war department, by the general.

From his place of exile on Prinkipo Island, near the Dardanelles, Trotsky gave the Associated Press his prophecy for America.

'LIVE-AT-HOME' PROGRAM PUSHED BY IRISH LEADERS

Proponents Heartened by Work of De Valera To Place Land on Road to Self-Sufficiency.

DUBLIN, Ireland, March 25.—(AP)—Irish Free State's capacity to produce much of its own goods requirements, the administration believes, has been definitely proved by the success of efforts made thus far.

There are many critics of the policy of protection being enforced so swiftly, but proponents are heartened by the work of the De Valera administration to place the land on the road to self-sufficiency.

Sean F. LeMass, minister for industry and commerce, pointed out recently that there appears to be something fundamentally wrong in a country predominantly agricultural which, during recent years, imported an average of $100,000,000 worth of goods under the heading of animals, food-stuffs and drink.

Many of these imports, he said, cannot be replaced by native produce, but obviously there is scope for considerable native produce.

Protective Duties.

Protective duties already enforced are seen to be better than the position since imports have completely or almost ceased in respect of meat, poultry, bacon, butter, margarine, eggs, condensed milk, flour, meal, bread, sugar, chocolate confectionery and preserves.

The government has expressed its determination that under this category home production will be extended in every possible way.

Statements of policy and progress as contained in government reports on some further branches of industry are as follows:

Furniture: $8,000,000 worth has been imported annually. Now, free states duties will compel the making of all requirements at home within a reasonable time.

Sugar: It is hoped to meet the total sugar requirements from home-grown beet.

Cheese: Home production is rising rapidly.

Fruit and vegetables: More extensive production, and a canning industry is to be established.

Men's clothing: Soon, it is hoped, there will be no more imports.

Women's clothing: Steady progress is anticipated.

Woolen goods: No insuperable reason why native production should not reach the point of meeting total national requirements.

Vehicles: Efforts are being made to develop the body building industry so that the only necessity will be to improve the chassis. All commercial motor bodies are being made in the country.

Iron and steel: All constructional steelwork must be fabricated in the country. The agricultural machinery industry has been saved from extinction.

Other Industries Developed.

In addition, glass and slate industries are now being developed and the government hopes within the year to see in operation a paper mill capable of supplying the bulk of the country's requirements.

Concerning the government's wheat policy, LeMass said: "We have drawn up a program of wheat growing which should in time make us largely independent of foreign wheat supplies."

"We are determined that the total food requirements of this predominantly agricultural country shall be supplied from home sources."

"New flour mills will be built and old ones reopened and these will provide not only the national requirement for flour but will yield sufficient other materials to decrease considerably the imports of feeding stuffs."

"A new market for home-grown oats, barley and other cereals has been created not only in the oatmeal mills but in the numerous small grist mills to be found in every rural area."

He added that so much pressure is being brought to bear on the government to launch a four or five-year industrial plan that the proposal is now receiving the careful consideration of the cabinet.

SOVIET PEASANTS REFUSE TO WORK

Entire Striking Brigade Deprived of Government Dole, Seed Loan.

ROSTOV-ON-DON, Russia, March 25.—(AP)—A report from north Caucasus provinces today told of the refusal of a group of collective farmers to work in the fields because of complaints of no food and their summary punishment as "saboteurs."

They are the members of the second brigade of a collective farm called "the way to socialism" in the Krasnodar district, who, according to an official report, "refused to work because of no food and refused to start spring planting."

The three leaders of the brigade were arrested by the local secret police (MVD) and the entire brigade, usually consisting of more than 10,000 peasants, was deprived of the government's food and seed loan.

Nine other peasants were expelled from five collective farms in the Krasnodar district and six of them were expelled to the far north for failure to work. The cause in their cases was not stated.

The report added that had "labor difficulties" been noted in several villages which already had started sowing in the region.

The Soviet government is encountering difficulties in enforcing its agricultural policies in the north Caucasus and only recently revealed that had been forced to feed large sections of the peasantry there because of insufficient production.

35,000 IN INDIANA TURN TO FARMS

Relief Gardening Projects Furnish Livelihood for Many Families.

By JOHN W. STAHR.

GARY, Ind., March 25.—(AP)—"The workshop of America," its industrial output decimated by depression, has sent thousands of its workers "back to the land."

And in a region where land by nature offers a minimum of encouragement to those who would wring sustenance from it, hands more accustomed to tending giant mills than to soil-tilling have battled hard times on almost even terms.

Lake county, with a population of more than 250,000—an overwhelming percentage of whom depended for their livelihood on once-thriving steel mills and oil refineries of Gary, East Chicago, Hammond and Whiting—has sponsored relief gardening projects on a scale perhaps without parallel in the nation.

Leaders of the movement say they intend to operate on an even larger scale during the coming summer.

More than 35,000 people have turned to "the good earth" in these projects, and the value of the produce raised in 1932 is placed by Purdue University agriculturalists at $550,000 and $800,000.

The report of Walter J. Riley, chairman of the county relief committee, shows 5,221 gardens—948 acres—were tilled in 1932 under sponsorship of the county.

All this in a county whose whole northern strip—20 miles along Lake Michigan's southern shore—is sandy, "duneland" country, and south of this a large, heretofore unproductive, marshy area. In East Chicago and Whiting, the report says, "probably not a half-dozen acres are of black dirt origin."

One group of people in sandy East Chicago had to go 10 miles to the nearest available black soil, where they tilled their tract of some 600 gardens.

The largest individual project under county auspices was a 105-acre tract in Gary, where a rotating force of more than 100 men each week toiled under supervision of Mrs. Mary Grace Wells, township trustee, raising enough produce to sustain their 3,200 families through the summer months with a considerable surplus being canned for winter consumption.

Mussolini Seeks Population Gain

By JOHN W. STAHR.

ROME, March 25.—(AP)—An appeal by Premier Mussolini for a 17,000,000 increase in Italy's population in the next 10 years has brought keen rivalry by city governments in offering inducements for matrimony.

Some of the offers are:

The city of Brindisi promises cash wedding presents of $50 to the first 10 couples who marry there.

Brescia offers similar gifts to 50 couples.

Rari will give a crib and blankets on the arrival of a baby in the first year of marriage. Ten cash prizes will be distributed each month. Twice a year brides wearing costumes will be given to brides who cannot afford a special dress for the occasion.

Genoa offers 100 wedding gifts of 250 each.

Leghorn will give $15 on the arrival of the sixth and seventh infants, $30 for the eighth and ninth and $50 for each child over the ninth.

Cuneo promises $10 for each child after the sixth, and also tax exemption and rent reductions.

Il Duce has assigned the income from the tax on bachelors to the national bureau for protection of mothers and infants.

State railways grant 70 per cent fare reductions to couples on honeymoon trips.

Vienna Typesetters Strike Indefinitely

VIENNA, March 25.—(AP)—Vienna faced the prospect today of being without Viennese newspapers indefinitely.

Typesetters on all city papers struck today in protest against the press censorship imposed more than two weeks ago when Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss assumed dictatorial powers.

The route lay from Bombay via Delhi, Lahore and Quetta, through Baluchistan, to Isfahan, Baghdad and Beirut, thence across Asia Minor to Istanbul and thence to Vienna and Berlin.

The first trouble was encountered in the trackless wilds of Baluchistan, where the car had to be dug out of the sand seven times in one day.

The travelers soon learned that during the period just before and after sunrise the sands presented a harder surface, and to this they owed their success in crossing the Lut desert afterward with only one forced stop.

Nine days were required in Asiatic Turkey to go from Beirut to the Bosporus, for winter rains in the Taurus mountain regions had turned the area into a swamp. It is claimed such an attempt had never been made before in the rainy season. The motorists found their progress reduced to 25 miles a day, whereas in the Syrian desert they were able to make a top speed of 500 miles a day.

The stretch between Tcheran and Bagdad was covered in a forced non-stop run of 48 hours to escape blizzards on the highlands of Iran.

One thousand six hundred miles of the journey was over roadless deserts and for 2,000 miles mule tracks formed the only trails. Often the autoists escaped marauding bands of natives by fast driving.

COMMUNISM FEAR IS FELT BY FRANCE

Colonial Offices in Paris Guard Against Agitation in Protectorates.

By JOHN W. STAHR.

PARIS, March 25.—(AP)—Fear of the spread of communism in her protectorates and colony of Indo-China remains one of the dominant factors in shaping France's policy in the far east.

For several years past communist agitators have been operating among France's oriental wards, and have caused the colonial officials considerable concern.

Because of the large extent of territory and the vast force of trained white troops available, the authorities have been obliged to be especially vigilant, and prompt in repressing any local troubles.

Consequently, the resumption of diplomatic relations between Soviet Russia and China, effected last December, has given the colonial offices in Paris, and officials in the far eastern field itself, food for thought.

Some of the government's oriental experts have professed to foresee a recurrence of communist activity in the great country to the north of Indo-China, with the red propaganda seeping down into their own overseas domain.

Prior to that, the constitution of the state of Manchukuo and its recognition by Japan was hailed by some veteran colonial authorities, and by army and navy officials having had far eastern service, as a distinct boon to the French position in Indo-China.

"From the French viewpoint," a contributor wrote in the widely read organ of the Reserve Officers' Association, "We cannot but rejoice to see constituted, on the frontier of soviet Siberia, a sane, peaceful and strong state which, forming a solid barrier before the bolshevik enterprises, will cover our Indo-Chinese possessions, menaced by the Muscovite poison."

The French foreign office, however, has been wedded to the pact of the League of Nations and desirous of going along with the United States in refusal to recognize Manchukuo.

With Japan leaving the Geneva body, and France still holding off from recognition, less talk of the benefits likely to result from the new state's constitution has been heard, at least officially.

TWO TURKISH GIRLS TAKE AVIATION COURSE

ISTANBUL, March 25.—(AP)—Two girls, Selma Hanim and Feriha Hanim, have enrolled in the first Turkish civil aviation school, which is being opened here. Only 16 students will be admitted the first year.

SOVIET GRAPHITE MILL OPERATING IN ARCTIC

IRKUTSK U. S. S. R., March 25.—(AP)—A new graphite mill, recently completed at Igarka, beyond the arctic circle, has begun operations.

What was hard for him, he continued, was the fact that he had not been permitted for four weeks to see his wife and children, but this was remedied yesterday when they came to him.

He vigorously denied having been at the Reichstag shortly after the fire February 27, for which the government held communist incendiaries responsible. He also denied having left the Reichstag building at about the time taken for the preventive arrest.

He took no part in a physical way of which to complain.

To a question about whether, as charged by Captain Goering, he "whined" when he was arrested, Herr Torgler flashed: "That is absolutely untrue."

Herr Renn, who stood defiantly in the police chief's office, seemed unimpressed to talk much but he did complain of the food.

"These men could not be better cared for if they were under God's personal protection," Chief Diehlis said after the prisoners had been led

"DO-NOTHING" LEGISLATURE.

PILLORIED BY STATE PRESS

Significant of the storm of criticism of the recent session of the legislature is the reminder to the people of the state by Jack Williams, editor of the Waycross Journal-Herald and president of the Georgia Press Association, that "the one remedy for an inefficient legislature is the vote of the people."

As a unit, the press of the state, from the largest dailies to the smallest country weeklies, has mercilessly castigated the obstructionist members of the general assembly and are urgently calling on the voters to retire them to private life at the end of their present terms. Excerpts from many of these editorials are presented on the opposite page.

The Albany Herald terms the session "a pitiful spectacle of organized impotence," while the McDonough Advertiser holds that "the preponderance of their incompetence has smeared the state with shame."

Not in a half century has a Georgia legislature been pilloried as has this one, and throughout the storm of criticism runs an urgent appeal to the voters to awaken to the necessity of sending worthy representatives to the general assembly.

The same appeal is the basis of hundreds of communications received by The Constitution, the writer of one graphically expressing his feeling by the statement that "my soul cries out for Georgia to awake."

Such an awakening is Georgia's greatest need at this time.

The state government is in crying need of a thorough legislative house cleaning, but this can be accomplished only by sending dependable spokesmen to the general assembly.

The blame for the incompetence of the present general assembly rests primarily upon the people—and the remedy lies solely in their power.

That remedy is to be found at the polls, and the time to get ready for it is now!

In the heyday of good government in Georgia following the ousting of the carpetbaggers, the voters sent representative professional and businessmen and farmers to speak and act for them in the general assembly.

If we are again to have safe and sane government, the voters of the state must say so, and the only way they can so express themselves is in the caliber of those they choose to represent them.

TWO NOTABLE VISITORS.

Atlantans this week will be given opportunity to hear two outstanding leaders of the religious world in Dr. Albert W. Beaven, president of Colgate-Rochester Divinity school, and Dr. Stanley Jones, famous missionary.

Dr. Jones, who will address a great union mass meeting at the city auditorium Monday night, has spent many years as a missionary in China and India and is the author of numerous books which have had world-wide distribution.

Elected a bishop in his church some years ago, he refused the high office to continue his work in India, and now comes to Atlanta to tell the inspiring story of the Gospel's march into the darkest corners of the earth.

Dr. Beaven will speak this afternoon and tonight at the Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist church, dealing with the relation of our social and Christian standards to the present economic situation. He is widely known for his breadth of vision, his deep insight into spiritual matters and his unusual ability as an orator.

The addresses of these internationally known religious leaders will be intellectual treats, bringing new facts and viewpoints of value to both church-goers and non-church-goers. They should be heard by audiences in keeping with the ability and world-wide reputations of the speakers.

THE IDLE PRISON FARM.

The refusal of the prison commission to move more than 75 Fulton county convicts to the state farm, because of lack of funds for their care, reveals an intolerable condition brought about by the failure of the legislature to properly perform its duties.

Prisoners physically unfitted for chain gang service, and for whose care the state prison farm is conducted, fill the jails of the state because the prison commission has not even enough money to send them to Milledgeville, while the new prison farm in south Georgia is practically untouched.

Fulton county, paying more than a fifth of the total tax revenue of the state government, is thus forced to go to the unjust expense of caring for prisoners for whom it is paying the state to provide.

A few years ago the state, at a large expense, bought an extensive farm in southeast Georgia on which to erect a new and ample prison farm in which to care for the physically deficient prisoners from all counties.

That fine piece of property is now lying idle because no provision has been made to develop it for the purpose for which it was bought.

If the almost $10,000 that was voted by the legislature for traveling expenses not incurred by its members had been put to this purpose, material progress would have been made towards the grave problem of what to do with the hundreds of prisoners being improperly detained in the county jails of the state.

The situation is not only a financial injustice to every county government in the state, but a disgrace to the state in its failure to give proper care to those who have erred and are now paying the penalty of their law-breaking.

THE TROUBLED SOVIETS.

The sudden outbreak of harsh punitive measures resorted to by the soviet government against various elements of the country's population argues that all is not well in the nation whose governmental experiment is based upon the fundamental of equality of wealth, labor and opportunity.

Revolts some months ago in some of the southern grain-growing sections resulted in the populations of whole villages being arrested and sent to the bleak horror of life in the mines and forests of northern Russia.

About a month ago some 30 or more officials of the soviet government itself were suddenly arrested, some to be later executed and others to receive long prison terms.

Now comes the arrest of six British subjects, together with still more Russians—a procedure to which the British government is making violent protest.

The disturbance of the British is ascribed by the Washington Star to the fact that "Russian 'jurisprudence' is a travesty." Commenting upon the position of Americans in Russia, the Star says: "No foreigner's life is safe in Russia if the dictatorship decides that he must be sacrificed for political reasons. The Stalin crowd can easily save foreigners, however, when it is politically expedient. The courts are as much under the thumb of the dictatorship as any other department of the soviet government. British threats to break off diplomatic relations may induce the soviet to abandon the prosecution, especially since the Hitler regime in Germany is preparing to terminate the government guarantees to German traders dealing with Russia. The soviet is seeking to establish diplomatic relations with all the great powers, and may deem it wise not to arouse their fears for the safety of their nationals in Russia."

Americans employed in Russia are at course risking the same treatment that is accorded to British subjects, but so long as Stalin hopes to win diplomatic recognition from the United States it is not probable that Americans will be charged with sabotage and threatened with death at the hands of a corrupt judiciary.

Certainly the developments of the last few months in soviet Russia, capped by the events leading to the present controversy with Great Britain, are not encouraging to the new drive which seems to be getting under way in this country for recognition of Russia by the United States.

As a matter of fact, the possibility of such recognition has become increasingly remote during the past two years as development after development have made more clear the ruthless disregard of Stalin and his associates for treaties or laws that might stand in their way.

Senator King, of Utah, in a recent statement, points out the dangers of such recognition in the declaration that "the soviet state is irresponsible and immoral in international dealings and with no intention of mending her ways." He terms as absurd the claim that recognition would increase our trade with Russia, holding that "any nation that can extend credit to Russia, can sell Russia."

Many Americans, lured to Russia during the past few years by tempting offers, have come home disillusioned. Recent events in the country of the soviets indicate that still less opportunity now exists, and that the best thing for an American to do is to stay away from Russia.

MACDONALD'S DIFFICULT TASK.

The ticklish nature of the task faced by Premier MacDonald in seeking a plan on which the nations of Europe can get together to avoid a war which might involve the entire continent, is emphasized in the cold reception given his report of progress by the British parliament and the openly expressed belief in France that the so-called "big four" scheme is already as good as shelved.

An anomalous situation developed when the French government let it be known that the big four scheme was "justifiable" provided its development was kept within the framework of the League of Nations, while, at almost the same moment, Winston Churchill was telling parliament that the only way peace could exist on the continent was "under the shield of the French army."

The task faced by Premier MacDonald when he left London last week on his errand of peace was a worthy one. The co-operation of Mussolini in whatever plan might be evolved was of first importance, but the task of bringing France into line was made all the more difficult by the necessity for Italian agreement.

Premier MacDonald went to the continent largely with an open mind as to any specific plan to avert war. The proposal for a four-power pact between England, France, Italy and Germany is Mussolini's, and French suspicion was a natural result.

The suggestion comes at a time when French newspapers are filled with charges that Italian spies are busily taking notes on the construction of the fortifications being erected by France on the border between the two nations, and when France is protesting against the revisions of the treaty of Versailles demanded by Hitler and which it is evident are being favored by both England and Italy.

The Mussolini plan contemplates that the four great nations of Europe join hands in an agreement to promote both security and peace, in the spirit of the Kellogg pact, with a "no force" declaration.

If France joins with England and Italy in working out a plan along the line of Mussolini's suggestion, it is probable that these revisions will be far less objectionable to her than if she single-handed and alone opposed revision of any kind.

Unquestionably an adjustment of some sort is necessary—affecting the military, economic and Polish corridor clauses of the treaty. If France can be satisfied on a program as to these, the friendly efforts of MacDonald should be able to bring about a basis on which the four nations involved can get together.

The most hopeful phase of the situation is that Great Britain is not directly involved in the turmoil on the continent and is thus in a logical position to take over the difficult and delicate task of bringing order out of the chaos into which Europe has been catapulted since the rise of Hitler to power.

THE BEST WAYS TO RECOVERY.

The two most direct methods of hastening the return of better times are through rational spending and a continuance of the present spirit of confidence, in the opinion of one of the largest credit companies in the country.

The Commercial Credit Company, through its official organ, cites that "rational spending is essential in an industrial age wherein people work for each other and require each other's patronage to make them prosperous."

In the same publication, H. Bertram Lewis, vice president of the company, takes the position that the "basic conception behind our blunders has been the notion that we could either protect our own selfish welfare or restore national prosperity by methods that undermine confidence. We have disregarded the fundamental truth that business is done just 100 per cent in men's minds and that it prospers only when men's minds are in the right relation to it."

Significant of the new drive for normal buying which has been launched in every section of the country is the message of Charles Edison, son of the late Thomas A. Edison, in which he says to the employees of the Edison company—

Buy something—buy anything, anywhere; paint your kitchen, send a telegram, give a party, get a car, pay a bill, rent a flat, fix your roof, get a haircut, see a show, build a house, take a trip, sing a song, get married. It does not matter what you do—but get going and keep going. This old world is starting to move.

That the confidence of the nation has been rekindled almost overnight by the militant attitude of the new administration, and that normal buying has, as a result, already begun to put in its appearance, is apparent in every section of the country.

These facts, viewed in the light of the opinion of the executives of a business organization necessarily conservative in their outlook, bring comforting reassurance that the present upward turn is a permanent movement to more normal conditions.

PERU JOINS JAPAN.

The condemnation by the League of Nations of the conduct of Peru in the controversy between that country and Colombia places it in much the same category as Japan.

The fact that, like Japan, this South American nation is, in substance, telling the League that the row is none of its business, again brings forward the question as to the usefulness, in its present shape, of the association of nations from which so much was hoped in the effort toward world peace.

The international developments of the last year or so demonstrate that when a nation is at odds with a neighbor plenty of reasons can be produced to justify its actions to its own satisfaction, whatever the opinion of the world may be.

That was the course taken by Japan, and now Peru follows suit—and in the meantime most of the nations of Europe, all signatories of the League covenant, are ready to spring at each other's throat.

The most significant feature of world events of the last two years has been the revelation that the League covenant as now framed is an impotent instrument to perform the things it was designed to accomplish.

One of the most vital functions hoped for the League was to prevent war in Europe, and yet at the first serious threat of conflict on the continent since its creation, the picture is now presented of efforts for peace being carried on, not primarily through the League, but in the old manner of negotiations looking to the signing of a pact between a group of nations.

The League was a noble conception, but its fundamental faults of construction, and the intricacies of European diplomacy, have choked its effectiveness until during the last 12 months its efforts have been little more than idle gestures.

The spelling indicates that Chinese troops have surrendered a hiccup and made their stand 200 miles north of a sneeze.

The trouble about a land without classes is that every law designed to relieve you as a debtor soaks you as a creditor.

Neurotic: Anybody who thinks you mean it when you ask how he is.

Another thing that loses value when there's too much of it is wealth.

The sad thing about human nature is its inability to learn sense except on a diet of hush.

Lives of great men oft remind us that everything depends on having a good press agent.

Yet you can't even remember the opinions you defended so excitedly five years ago.

A philosopher is a man who now feels about current frenzies as you will a year later.

It's an even break. Thirteen years of prohibition, and 13 states can block repeal.

Some are smart and some are morons, but the classifying is always done by the smart.

The best explanation of Hitler's power is Germany's proverbial weakness for a freak mistake.

If it's true that the fittest survive, Japan needn't worry about a rival addicted to crooners.

The question is, do great men disagree like that or have we classified some of them wrong?

These new plaid suitings for men will go nicely with their checkered careers.

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

When Foch Was Nonplussed.

An Italian officer with whom I traveled part of the way not long ago told me an incident of the great war which he said revealed that the lack of sympathy between France and Italy is by no means of recent date. After the battle of Caporetto, Marshal Foch went to Italy to persuade the Italians to send some divisions to the south of France to reorganize there. The Italians had lately been heavily defeated at Caporetto. Foch pleaded in vain at Rome and then went to the Italian front to visit the commander of the Italian army, General Cadorna. The officer I met, just a young lieutenant at the time, was present at the historic interview between the two military chiefs. They fell to talking of the declining birth rate in France and the sharp decline in Italy. Foch never tolerated the slightest aspersions on the French people. Anyway, after awhile the passage at arms died down and they went in to dinner. At dinner Foch broached the subject of sending the troops to France. At this Cadorna turned on him and said: "We can't spare a man!"

"That's all nonsense," came back Foch. "On my way here I looked out the train and saw lots of men working in the fields. In France the land is tilled by women."

"Quite so," replied Cadorna, "but you see in Italy our women are occupied having babies."

They were back on the acrimonious topic and Foch was silent. He never broached the subject again, my informant said.

George Lansbury's Formula.

Mr. George Lansbury, the veteran labor leader and leader of the opposition in the British parliament, was 74 years of age the other day. A reporter asked him what he intended to do on his birthday and he replied: "Work of course. I am going to the house of commons, but I hope to snatch a couple of hours during the evening to go home and have a romp and a pleasant little diversion with the members of my family. If the business before the house is important I shall return and remain until it is over."

"How do you manage to keep so well and cheerful?" he was asked next. "Well," he said, "I don't overeat and I don't oversleep. I just go to my job of work every day. The less people think about what they eat and drink the better it is for them. The more important service in life is to look the better it is for you. I do not think that anybody gets the real joy out of life when he is always thinking about himself. It is only when you are absorbed in the general community that you really pack up your troubles."

"Good advice, that!"

Samuel Pepys.

If the spirit of Samuel Pepys is keeping a diary in a comfortable Valhalla, he has been busy recording pleasant things about himself lately. For they have just celebrated the 300th anniversary of the famous diarist in London, and what he did with great pomp and circumstance. Nothing but good was said of him. His favorite hymns were sung at a commemorative service in St. Paul's cathedral, restaurants served his favorite dishes, theaters put on pantomime shows wherein figured actors dressed in the clothes which the diarist described as "very neat." Nothing was said about the bad parts in the diary. For Samuel was honest and wrote down everything. But he did not intend posterity to read what he had noted down. He did not seek sensation. For that reason he wrote in shorthand and it took many, many years before his scrip was deciphered.

To us today, the diary, that is the expurgated form, remains a perpetual delight, for the same reason that Coleridge once praised it: "A diary is like a man like a polluted tree, strong, stout, full of sap, not ascending far into the heavens, but rich in foliage!"

Everyday Questions

BY DR. R. PARKES CADMAN.

Lincoln, Neb.—Do you agree with me that Napoleon Bonaparte was the greatest man of his age?

Mr. Case related, and after a delay of another six months, received full payment. Unusual credit for potentially "solid" patrons became general. The Algonquin was not only not lost a single long account of this type, but has reaped the gratitude of the unfortunate craftsmen and become famous.

Some examples of the "Back to 1914" prices, with new Broadway prices, are: Haircut, shave, massage, shampoo and shoe, $1.

Cereal or fruit, two eggs, any style, French fried potatoes, bacon or ham, buttered toast and coffee, 25 cents. Tenderloin steak, 25 cents, and filet mignon, 40 cents.

Hotel dinners (except at de luxe places), 85 cents.

Movies a block off the main stem, 10 cents.

BARTENDERS IN LINE.

As optimistic as the brewers, have been the old-fashioned bartenders, according to reports of the local union. Over 3,500 in New York city alone, and 8,000 in the state have kept on paying dues, and anticipate early and permanent positions. Those who draw beer—and the union maintains that it is an art—will get a minimum of $25 a week, it is said, but if goods of greater alcoholic strength are legalized, the wage will be $35. Most of the 3,500 New York veterans are eligible for the $50 rate, according to those who can "mix anything," and it is guaranteed that none of them drinks or smokes.

JIMMY WALKER PROMOTED.

Regardless of the opinions of some people, The Grand Street Boys, a social organization of men prominent in political and business life who had lowly beginnings on or near New York's east side, have stuck loyally to former Mayor James J. Walker. At the annual meeting of the body, Mr. Walker was elevated from sixth to seventh place.

Post Tempestum Tranquillitas.

After the storm, peace. Surely every one should have a sanctified spot, inviolate against the maddening crowd's ignoble hate. And those so disposed can make it. The child's nook in the cottage and the aged man's chimney corner in the humble but are places where heaven's dew often distill plentifully. For rest—without depends on that rest—within provided by an approving conscience and a loving heart.

That Old Sweetheart

TEXT AND PRETEXT

BY M. ASHBY JONES.

Representative Democracy.

Last Sunday, in this column, I laid down the thesis that democracy is not a form of government, but that it is the fundamental principle, that all political authority is derived from the consent of the people. The authority of a democratic government, whatever its form, is a delegated authority. That authority may be delegated to many people, or to one person, but so long as it is the will of the people it is democratic.

So when the people, through their representatives in congress, delegated unusual authority to their president the other day, it was just as much an act of democracy as when they elect a member of the town council.

But since our national legislature, and our chief executive are both representatives of the people, it may be helpful to inquire, why did we all so enthusiastically transfer this authority from the legislature to the executive office? The answer, I think, is that the people, in their wisdom, recognized that the executive office was the only one in which the interests of the nation, and not the interests of a particular district or state, could be protected.

Local vs. National. Our is a representative democracy, but a close examination of our method of choosing our representatives, will reveal the truth, that our national legislature is only remotely representative of the nation, but is composed of members, each of whom is directly and sympathetically a representative of local interests and provincial prejudices. He receives his authority from, and is dependent for his maintenance upon, only a small portion of the people who make up the nation. We must face the fact that the vast majority of the constituents of these representatives do not think nationally but locally, and they inevitably become the representatives of local aspirations and ideals. This is the reason congressional legislation seldom embodies well-considered national interests and policies, but is the composite effort of locally-minded representatives, to care for provincial and sectional interests and enterprising. This is the philosophy of the congressional technique of "log-rolling."

One of the significant effects of our three-year business depression has been to make the people of the entire country nationally conscious. Unemployment, with its accompanying relief funds, decreased trade with fifth vice president, one of his predecessors having died. "We don't throw a man down just because the public does," it was explained.

POSTOFFICE PENS.

The order of William Evans, the new fourth assistant postmaster-general, that every postoffice in the country have fresh pens and liquid ink daily means not a thing to Ansel M. Willis, in charge of supplies at the main New York postoffice.

"We do it anyway," said Mr. Willis blithely. In fact, our pens and penholders are so good that our customers prefer them to those bought at stores. In some stations, particularly near the schools, the pens disappear an hour after opening. We use 3,007 quarts of ink, 1,500 dozen penholders and 2,775 boxes of pen points, with 75 to a box, in one year.

GOLDEN NIGHTCAP.

It is the custom of a man who lives in a residential hotel in the Forties to drop into the neighborhood "Tony's" before bedtime each night and buy a small cardboard container of beer to take home for a nightcap.

It is also a New York speakeasy custom—as prevalent as leaving the depressed prices, have been discussed nationally, and the remedies proposed have all been national in their scope. Then when the "bank holiday," beginning in Michigan, spread in contagious terror over the nation, we became an emotionally united people, breathing the same atmosphere of anxiety, and sensitive to the same remorse of fear and hope. So it was sensationally significant, when President Roosevelt sat in his study and, in simple friendly fashion, through a microphone transformed a national skepticism and fear into a national confidence and hope. For the time being, at least, the people realize that the highest welfare of each locality is bound up in the highest welfare of the entire country.

Of course, this has always been true, but hitherto it has been impossible for most of the national in our localities, to see it. For that reason congressional districts and states have been so intent upon sending their representatives to represent their short-sighted ambitions, that the representatives of the interests of a nation have been in a hopeless minority. Yet the only hope of success of a national democracy is in the creation of a national consciousness, which shall send to Washington congressmen from Virginia or California, but who shall be representatives of all the people of the United States.

A Short Ballot.

Our present national political disease, which has infected municipal, state and national governments, demands representatives from every kind of local district, state, and insists that this ever-multiplying number of representatives be chosen by ballot. It has become flagrantly manifest that the widest range of known names presented, an intelligent choice is impossible. But, while this situation practically nullifies the franchise of the average man, it is admirably suited to the purposes of the professional politician. It enables him to choose representatives, not of the people, but of the selfish ambitions of his machine or clique. When we remember that these "professionals" are themselves the representatives of all kinds of "special interests," it is not difficult to see how democracy, so often, becomes a sham political form, by which the few rule the many.

Now when we are thinking nationally, it is a good time to cultivate and develop the idea of national representation in government. This principle will apply also to the state and the municipal governments. It is necessary, for a genuine representation of our interests to have so many representatives, to whom we would delegate great authority, for which we could intelligently hold them responsible. The hope of America to-day is centered in President Roosevelt, because to him has been delegated by the people great authority, and upon him has been placed a great responsibility.

key in the mail box—to "hide" all excess cash in one of these containers, and leave only a small amount in the cash register, for fear of hold-ups.

One night this week our friend made his usual trip, and when he poured out his "night-night," a dark object flopped out of the "night-night" bag. "I thought it was a mouse," he said, "but it was a roll of $104."

There was a great to-do at the aquarium when it was determined that Minnie, the largest inmate, a 350-pound guppy, was planning away for lack of fin-room. Minnie's tank was only 14 feet long, and to make a proper turn, something resembling a somersault was necessary. A loss of appetite and a pained expression resulted.

A larger tank, 28 by 12 feet, was set up in the aquarium. The question arose how to move Minnie. The keeper finally slipped a piece of tarpaulin under the big fish, after the fashion of a stretcher, and eight men seized the iron bar that went through flaps at the top, and started upstairs.

Minnie, ascending first, put up a fight, and slipped out. She was recaptured, with difficulty, and finally put in her new home.

Promotion of Miss Dell in Accord With Democratic Principles, Writes Prominent South Georgia Woman

Editor Constitution: Miss Jessie Dell, by right of her splendid heritage and efficient service, deserves the unanimous endorsement of her native state to be retained on the civil service commission. She is the daughter of the late Colonel John Dell of Screven county, Georgia, and inherits in her veins the blood of Georgia's first settlers. She is a descendant of those who laid the cornerstone of our great state, and who helped to make it "The Empire State of the South." Lucas Zeigler, an emigrant from the Salzburger, who settled in the North, and Colonel John Palmer, of Oglethorpe's army, were her ancestors.

In the cemetery of "Old Milledgeville" in Liberty county, Georgia, stand high two marble shafts, erected by the United States government in recognition of the heroism of the generals who fought and fell, mortally wounded while in the service of their country, during the Civil War. General Stewart, the ancestor of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, and General Screven, the ancestor of Miss Jessie Dell.

John Dell, the great-grandfather of Miss Dell, married Mary Jones, in Bulloch county in 1810. By this marriage she is related to the Young, Jones, Sharpe, Donaldson and Everett families.

Thirty-three years ago, when a mere girl, Miss Dell entered the federal service at the bottom of the ladder. Intelligent and hardworking, faithful and loyal, the efficient service she rendered was recognized, and she advanced steadily, in the course of time reaching the important position of head of the contract division of the quartermaster general's office, being the only woman head of a division in the war department.

In 1925 she was appointed as the democratic member of the bi-partisan civil service commission. Such promotion would be in accordance with the traditional policy of the democratic party, which is now controlling the destiny of the party, to reward long, efficient and loyal service.

As a member of that commission she has a brilliant record. She was fair, honest and determined. While guarding and fighting for the principles and doctrines of her party whenever the occasion demanded it, she has worked, at all times, for the best interest of the government, and fought relentlessly for equality for women in the federal service. These are the facts that are shown by the record of the commission. No one can truthfully say anything that is not highly creditable about Commissioner Dell's record as a member of the civil service commission. Her record as a member of this commission is absolutely above reproach in every respect, and will bear the investigation of the strictest nature.

Any allegations which might be made that reflect in any way on the integrity of Commissioner Dell's fairness, integrity or party loyalty are not borne out by the facts. They would be deliberate misrepresentation of the record of the commission, the purpose of helping some one who might be seeking her position, and in common fairness, should not be accepted without thorough investigation.

The civil service commission consists of three members, Miss Dell being the democratic member, and the other two being republicans. Now, with the democrats in control, there will be two democrats and one republican. There are no reasons, all excellent, why not only should Commissioner Dell be continued in office, but also, why she should be appointed president of the civil service commission. (1) In recognition of long, faithful and efficient service; (2) in recognition of her long, efficient and loyal service; (3) in recognition of her party loyalty.

Earned Promotion. Now that the democratic party, which Commissioner Dell has for more than twenty years ably and efficiently represented on the bi-partisan civil service commission, has come into power, she should by a rule of the party be appointed president of the civil service commission. Such promotion would be in accordance with the traditional policy of the democratic party, which is now controlling the destiny of the party, to reward long, efficient and loyal service.

As the voice of the people of Georgia cry out in unison, yours for Miss Jessie Dell to be retained on the commission and to be made president of the commission.

(MRS.) LUCY GARNETT OVERSTREET, Savannah, Ga., March 23, 1933.

Urges That Vacant Lots Be Furnished To Unemployed Negroes for Gardens

Editor Constitution: Why can't we interest property owners in offering vacant spaces to be cultivated by unemployed negroes?

I am sure that this work could be organized under the leadership of some fine colored citizens with the cooperation of white friends.

I am sure that lawlessness would stop in and around Atlanta when youth is put to work for personal gain.

I am sure that a spirit of good will would be engendered when a vagrant boy or girl reared in the slums finds community interest in his or her welfare.

I believe that our Chamber of Commerce would back such constructive work among our colored population.

I believe that such work in Atlanta, the "Gate City of the South," and in Georgia, the "adopted home" of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, would prove an example and inspiration to the whole country.

In such trying times let us get ready for better times.

Why waste the colored youth become set in idleness and consequent vagrancy or crime?

As I see it, we should do something and do it quickly, for our colored boys.

They should be organized into squad workers and work under capable gardeners and farmers.

Each church should be opened for a harvest home.

Money prizes should be offered by our most prominent citizens.

Possibly the city of Atlanta could offer the auditorium for a June exhibit, and only squad workers and gardeners could be allowed to enter for a rally of forces.

Urges Sweeping Changes To Bring About Court and Legislative Reforms

Editor Constitution: A recent session of the Georgia legislature, I am led to suggest the following changes in our constitution:

1. Abolish all the counties and substitute in their place judicial circuits of the state. Elect three state senators from each congressional district, for a term of six years, one-third to be elected in each year, the same as United States senators are elected. Allow two or more representatives from each judicial circuit, in proportion to population, to be elected, should more than five members be allowed from a judicial circuit. Representatives should be elected for a term of four years.

2. The superior court should be known as the circuit court. This court should be domiciled at that present county seat of each judicial circuit, and should have the best and most ample facilities for carrying on the business of the court. There should be set up a court, to be known as the district court, at each of the present county seats, and all other state minor courts, including the J. P. courts, should be abolished, and their functions should be performed by the new district court.

3. The judges of the district courts should be appointed by the judge or judges of the circuit court, for a term of four years. The other officers of the district court, such as bailiff and clerk, should be appointed by the judge of the district court and should be subject to removal by the judge for good and sufficient cause.

4. The newly created district courts should have jurisdiction over misdemeanor cases and civil suits at law not exceeding $100. The circuit court also be empowered to hold preliminary hearings in felony cases, but the circuit court would have sole jurisdiction over all felony cases.

5. The circuit court should have jurisdiction over all cases which are not within the jurisdiction of the district courts. The circuit court should hold its sessions at the present county seats, and all other state minor courts, including the J. ## State Press a Unit in Criticising Disgraceful Record of "No Nothing" Legislative Session

THE REMEDY.
(From the Waycross Journal-Herald.)
However indignant you may be because the session of the Georgia legislature just closed did little and will be remembered mainly because of what it failed to do, that indignation will avail naught if it contents itself merely with verbal criticism of the legislature.

If the people of Georgia want a legislature that will accomplish major good for the state it is within the power of the people to elect constructive men to the next legislature.

If the people vote indifferently only to feel that they may criticize when the legislature is assembled, the people never will have an efficient legislature.

Hold in mind that the one remedy for the inefficient legislature is the vote of the people.

A DO-NOTHING LEGISLATURE.
(From the Athens Banner-Herald.)
After 70 days of fruitless double-flinging and filibustering, the 1933 session of the general assembly of Georgia came to a close Saturday night.

It appears that the legislature has left the people with a majority of the members to stretch out the session to its full limit, and not satisfied with that, a majority of the house for senate re-elected themselves pay for double mileage. An act that was nothing short of criminal.

In these trying times of financial depression, people burdened with taxes and the state embarrassed with a deficit of millions for these representatives to take from the pockets of the taxpayers a double mileage is tinged with the spirit as practiced by the carpet-baggers during the days of reconstruction in the south.

THE BIG FROLIC IS OVER.
(From the Tifton Gazette.)
The 70-day frolic of the members of the Georgia legislature has come to an end at midnight Saturday night. The taxpayers pay the bill.

Generally speaking, it was one of the biggest farces ever pulled off in Georgia.

All that was done could have been done in half the time, and could have saved the taxpayers, but it seems that the legislature as a whole has but one thought—pay them and let them go.

At all right, and voted themselves double mileage for the session. Great is our Georgia general assembly—when it comes to taking care of itself and "killing a big one."

We wonder what the people "back home" think of it.

A LEGISLATIVE FRANKENSTEIN.
(From the Valdosta Times.)
The past session of the Georgia legislature was more of a Frankenstein than a legislature.

While legislation deflected that for good legislation passed. The senate, dominated by a political group, actually voted to adjourn the session on the first day to make his administration a failure.

The house, more willing to co-operate with the senate and less concerned with the administration, became the scene of a bitter battle between the bus lawyers and the railroad lawyers, and the stalemate pyrotechnics little had been accomplished.

The session of the assembly proved conclusively that the legislature is a Frankenstein. The legislature failed to pass a tag bill, failed to do anything about the scandals in the department of agriculture, failed to call a convention to act on the twenty-first amendment and refused to consider any revision of Georgia's antiquated tax system.

The legislature failed to pass a resolution for a constitutional amendment for a tax on intangibles.

(From the Savannah News.)
The disgrace to Georgia of such a session of the legislature as closed on Saturday night would have been made by itself, but when over that session there is cast the reflection that its inability, or its failure, to accomplish anything for the people of the state, was partly due to the lobbyists who infested the state capital building and the Atlanta hotels, then the matter becomes an even sordid one.

The question: "How shall this government through the influence of lobbyists be brought to an end?"

A DERELICT LEGISLATURE.
(From the Thomasville Times-Enterprise.)
The legislature has shown itself to have been not only derelict but duty but woefully lacking in even the ethical soundness that would have been expected of the Georgia legislature.

Much could have been done to relieve the burdens of our state. Little was actually done. A resume of the acts of the legislature will convince even the most liberal-minded citizen of the state that it was a complete fiasco. Not only did it delay the most important measures but it bickered and compromised and killed some that were essential and necessary to our welfare.

SOME VIEWS OF THE LEGISLATURE.
(From the Savannah Morning News.)
From one end of the state to the other the recent general assembly being verbally castigated. It is having a dressing down such as has been inflicted on very few legislatures in Georgia's history.

It was a pitiful and altogether disheartening spectacle, the session of the Georgia legislature, as it was being verbally castigated. The session was "splitted" to haggling over trifles, diverting hairs, and promoting political feuds.

The legislators took "advantage" of a miserable technicality to bleed the state, is how the Columbus Enquirer or viewed the double mileage vote which it regards "as a disgrace upon the state and every member of the assembly" who voted for it.

What is the matter with the legislature? Why does it fail to do its duty? From all parts of Georgia get together and pile up a record for incompetence which has drawn cutting public rebukes from the press and the people. There are unquestionably able, honest and conscientious men in the legislature. What can they say for this record?

Was it a lack of leadership? Was it the same old policies? If Georgia can find out just who is responsible for this shocking exhibition and does not sweep them out of public life we mistake the temper of the people.

A STUPENDOUS FAILURE.
(From the Dalton Citizen.)
It is difficult to view the failure of the Georgia legislature in the light of the past. It had an opportunity to engage in and perform constructive work. There was much to do and much work to be done.

The legislature failed to do its duty. It was a stupendous failure. It was a disgrace to the state and to the people.

UNLAMENTED.
(From the Albany Herald.)
We have yet to hear a Georgian bemoaning the adjournment of the legislature.

Georgia legislature—or singing its praises.

WHERE THE BLAME BELONGS.
(From the Griffin News.)
Let's put criticism where it belongs.

If the state senate had accepted the license tag bill of the house, or if the house had accepted the senate amendment, the governor would not have issued his $3 edict.

The governor could suspend the entire tag rate but could not set up a new scale of license fees.

So the blame rests with the legislature and especially, we believe, with the senate, as the house at least showed signs of wanting to pass a tag bill.

PEOPLE DESERVED MORE.
(From the Elberton Star.)
The legislature started off on the wrong foot, and never did catch the train. There were some mighty fine men in both branches, and there were many of the kind who were a credit to the people who elected them.

The people of the state were entitled to more for their money than they got. One great trouble this year was the lack of co-operation all along the line. If the present servants, including highway board members, can't co-operate, it's up to the people to see that they name servants who can and will pull together for the common good.

WHAT WILL THE VOTERS DO?
(From the Dalton Citizen.)
It is said the legislature costs the taxpayers of the state $3,000 a day. Now that the session is over, you can see how much it costs.

"RASPUTIN AND THE EMPRESS" WITH BARRYMORES AT GRAND

Ten Authors Created Feature 'Woman Accused' at Paramount

Ten of the world's greatest living authors collaborated to write "The Woman Accused," the nationally known Paramount-Liberty magazine novel, the picturization of which opened yesterday at the Paramount theater, featuring Nancy Carroll, Cary Grant, John Halliday, Louis Calhern and Irving Pichel.

You'll find the greatest version of this story authored by coast-to-coast big sellers something to write home about; you'll agree wholeheartedly with the 5,000,000 magazine readers who sympathized with Glenda O'Brien when she first came to life on the written page, the creation of Rupert Hughes, Vicki Baum, Zane Grey, Vina Delmar, Irvin S. Cobb, Gertrude Atherton, J. P. McEvoy, Ursula Parrott, Polan Banks and Sophie Kerr.

It's a story that derives its fascination chiefly from the intimate knowledge of life possessed by its authors who give to each character the rhythmic pulsations of living beings. Glenda O'Brien, who, on her wedding eve, is face to face with a murder charge is no ephemeral character of the shadow screen, but rather a real woman, whose motivations and whose actions you'll understand and applaud.

Glenda, played by Nancy Carroll, murders Leo Young (Louis Calhern) with whom she once had been intimate, when he threatens the death of Jeffrey Baxter (Cary Grant), a young lawyer, to whom she is to be married.

She runs from the scene of the crime to Baxter's arms and the two leave on one of those ocean cruises that are becoming so popular nowadays.

An old servant of Glenda's goes to the dead man's apartment to destroy whatever clues may be left behind, just in time to rescue them from the hands of Stephen Bessmer (John Halliday), Leo Young's partner, and the police. Bessmer suspected Glenda, pursues her via a police car to the decks of the ocean liner, in a spectacular manner forces a confession and has her arrested when the vessel returns to land.

How she is saved from police retaliation is told in an exciting climax that features a thrilling duel between an ugly-looking "gat" and one of those sinuous Australian "bull-whips."

Al Evans has an especially novel organ program this week, and the short features offer excellent entertainment, with "Northern Exposure," a Vitaphone comedy, and a Paramount screen song entitled "Aloha Lo." Paramount Sound News is, as usual, most interesting.

Constance Bennett at Fox Theater In Satirical Comedy 'Our Bitters'

Satirical, smart and witty, "Our Bitters" now showing at the Fox theater, is a clever adaptation of W. Somerset Maugham's sophisticated drawing-room drama and a very effective vehicle for the glamorous Constance Bennett. Neither Connie nor her gowns have ever been lovelier, and her histrionic talents disclose a new subtlety, revealing her an actress equal to any role.

Despite the fact that Miss Bennett is almost constantly on the screen, the cast is imposing in number and importance, and Violet Kemple-Cooper, Anita Louise, Gilbert Roland, Grant Mitchell, Charles Starrett, Minor Watson, Phoebe Foster and others are tremendously effective in an interesting assortment of characters.

Miss Bennett portrays Lady Pearl Grayston, who said good-bye to an American fortune when she turned it over to an English title, Lord Grayston, her husband, promptly squandered her money and lives so much.

On the Riviera with his mistress that his wife, if she wants him to attend any of her parties, has to specially invite him. She is provided for by Fenwick, a wealthy vulgarian who considers it a special privilege to squander his money on the cleverest hostess in England, for these isn't a member of the smart, fast set who isn't eager to attend her affairs—she is the social rage.

Pearl has become quite unscrupulous and immediately disarms her critics by admitting it. She is not averse to affairs with other women's husbands and sweethearts, finding it their greatest attraction that they belong to another woman. When she is caught in a rendezvous with the young lover of an old duchess the situation only embarrasses Pearl when her young sister, Bessie, turns against her and calls her disgusting and common. Her strategy and cleverness is entirely equal to the situation of keeping her house party from breaking up, and to righting matters with Fenwick and to appointing the duchess. The situation could easily have made her ridiculous.

Lady Grayston didn't mind scandal—but ridicule would ruin her!

George Cukor's direction of "Our Bitters" is exceedingly deft, never losing sight of the seriousness beneath the frivolity. The sets are magnificent and in very good taste. Decidedly "better" is the entertainment offered in "Our Bitters."

Reception accorded the "Silly Symphonies" cartoon which is presented at the Fox this week in technicolor, attested to its popularity. A novelty "Puzzlegraph" and the regular RKO Pathe News complete the film bill.

Jimmy Beers, the versatile young Georgian, will present another of his very effective organ solos.

Franchot Tone came to California from the New York stage to appear with Joan Crawford in her new picture "Today We Live" at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, and brought along with him only summer clothes. Now the cold breezes are blowing along the Pacific coast and he is frantically working for his winter things.

Atlanta Theaters Bring to You, This Week--

British May Gain By Readjustment In U. S. Film Industry

By MOLLIE MERRICK.

(Copyright, 1933, by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 23.—The motion picture industry is at the beginning of a series of reconstruction moves every one of which will be difficult—fraught with upset, privation and disturbances of various sorts for everyone involved—and which will have to be combated by producers and ultimately given adjustment of one type or another.

Cameras and technicians, familiar with studio life and studio methods—wise to profits, to salaries, to percentages of officials, and to a number of other things known as "waste," "overhead," "good will" and similar things—haven't the slightest notion of accepting cuts in their highly trained professions.

Picture producers can't go on making written stories into celluloid stories without the aid of these in-between artists of the industry. So an adjustment with them seems inescapable. While all this goes on, it is in the picture for other branches of the industry—notably scenarists, dialogists, authors—to take a stand of some kind or other as to how their work is to be treated and to normalize a salary scale for this work.

During the upset caused by box-office falling off, nutting among the camera craft and technical squads, and possible disturbances in the writing element, the Hollywood player who has for some time been turning his head towards British production, finds this season the most pleasant in which to accept an offer from the English or continental studios. British Gaumont hasn't hesitated to make some very good offers to Hollywood talent who have jumped at them promptly, seeing in the jump a fine escape from troubles in the home field.

If our troubles keep up interminably, dragged on and on by the unwillingness of men accustomed to prodigious salaries to accept normal ones in keeping with the times and condition of world events, by the time our adjustment period is over we are apt to face some very keen competition from our English brothers who probably will be making some fine pictures with the surety, experience and opportunity provided by the present situation.

Everyone connected in any way with the theaters of Atlanta wore a brighter smile than usual last week. Manager W. T. Murray, who has been seriously ill at the Georgia Baptist hospital, was recovering rapidly and the promise was that he would soon be back in his office at the Rialto theater. He is now home from the hospital and, if the doctor permits, will visit the theater Monday or Tuesday for a short while. He is one of the most popular showmen in the city and everyone has followed the daily reports of his condition with anxious sympathy.

Announcement is made today of booking of Gene Austin and a supporting company of vaudeville stars at the Erlanger theater for the week of April 3. They call their offering "Broadway Rhapsody," and just what classification of entertainment it properly belongs to remains to be seen. Anyway, we all know Gene is good.

Ted Todd, Columbia's versatile maestro of exploitation, has been unusually quiescent for some weeks. The reason burst forth last week, when a rich, rare and racy publication entitled "Columbia's Southern Division," came from the press. It is a snappy magazine, with 99 44-100 per cent of its contents good reading matter. It even boasts a copyrighted interview on Page One, with M. A. Lightman. A few items are suspected as exaggerated, but otherwise it is entirely Okay. And it is to be hoped that the date on the initial issue has no significance. It is April First.

Sunya Shurman, one of Atlanta's better dancers and one of her most attractive girls, is leaving Monday for St. Petersburg, where she will take part in the "All Nations Pageant," a part of the big festival being staged there on March 31. The spectacle is presented by Sena Solomonoff, Atlanta's famous dancing teacher, and Mrs. Solomonoff has already gone to the Florida city to take part. Miss Shurman will do "Anitra's Dance," and the "Tibetan Devil Dance" during the pageant. She and Mr. and Mrs. Solomonoff will return to Atlanta at the close of the festival and pageant.

While it was not feasible to preview "Sailor's Luck," now at the Georgia, reports on this picture indicate that it has a lot to recommend it. Some critics claim it is snappy and, with lines that sparkle and sting with their wit and zest. Anyway, it boasts

Great Dramatic Spectacle 'Fascinates With Its Power'

Several qualities distinguished "Rasputin and the Empress," which is being shown this week at Loew's Grand theater. In this film (to be seen at no other house in Atlanta), the three Barrymores—Ethel, Lionel and John—appear together on the screen for the first time. This film is a historical one, based on events within the memory of many living men and women. It concerns the fatal last years of Romanoff rule in Russia.

Ethel Barrymore is seen as the Czarina, who falls into the power of Rasputin, Russia's fantastic, designing monk. Lionel Barrymore is Rasputin, John Barrymore is Prince Chegodoff, loyal friend of the Romanoffs and fiancé of Princess Natasha (Diana Wynyard), one of the empress' ladies-in-waiting. Ralph Morgan, remembered for his performance in "Strange Interlude," plays the role of Czar Nicholas.

"Rasputin and the Empress" opens with the festivities in connection with the 300th anniversary of Romanoff rule in Russia. From this majestic episode we are led into the household of the Romanoffs and shown the cares which beset them as rulers and as people. From his mother the young Czarevitch has inherited the dread curse of hemophilia. Even slightly wounded, he begins to bleed, and his blood has not the quality of coagulation, so that the blood continues to flow.

From the peril of bleeding to death the young Czarevitch is saved by Rasputin. Rasputin performs a seeming miracle, for Europe's leading

"Sailor's Luck" Now at Georgia With Dunn and Eilers Team

James Dunn and Sally Eilers have climbed aboard another hit with their latest co-starring picture, "Sailor's Luck," which is now showing at the Georgia theater. It is their fourth effort as a team, and those that witnessed the picture yesterday are under the impression that this is their best to date, even better than their famous "Bad Girl."

It is the story of a carefree sailor in the United States navy, who suddenly, and greatly to his surprise, finds himself in love with one girl, Raoul Walsh, the director, has taken to this picture the same old, same old piece of entertainment that is carried along on the wings of hilarity.

Much of the comedy in the picture is supplied by Sammy Cohen, who will be remembered for his fine comedy work in the sensational war production "What Price Glory." In addition to this picture the Georgia also has some entertaining added attractions on the program.

Jean Harsholt, Stuart Erwin, Wynne Gibson and Frances Deed head the cast of "The Crime of the Century," mystery drama, in a new style which arrives at the Grand for three days, starting Wednesday.

"The Crime of the Century" offers two innovations in presentation of a mystery story. First, the crime is confessed to the police before it is committed, and yet is carried through there is to be a child, but when the baby dies the girl goes to Mexico to get a divorce and return to the man the name she feels he only gave her for the sake of the child. Of course, the ending is happy, leaving a satisfactory finish to a picture that charms with its romance and delight with its clever lines and brilliant direction.

Suitable short subjects fully in line with the splendid reputation the Rialto has gained for this portion of its programs, have been secured for both programs of the week. There are comedies, cartoons and recent newsreel releases.

All in all, Manager W. T. Murray has again provided for his patrons two excellent programs that should spell huge crowds for the popular downtown house of bargain priced entertainment.

RKO-Radio reveals that, if the various sound-making machines constructed in its studio during the past three years were piled on the lot, there wouldn't be room for the office boy! A machine to reproduce the hissing roar of a prehistoric tyrannosaurus in "King Kong," for instance, occupied about 500 cubic feet of space, and the apparatus constructed to make the sound of the huge ape, Kong, beating upon its chest, included a sound box 20x25 feet.

Houses This Week

Atlanta's community theaters boast some interesting feature pictures for this week. These popular places of family amusement also offer selected short subjects to complete their programs.

DeKalb Has Romance
In "One-Way Passage"

Monday and Tuesday at the DeKalb, William Powell and Kay Francis appear in "One-Way Passage," an interesting story of two doomed lovers who found a lifetime's happiness at the brink of eternity. The supporting cast includes Frank McHugh, Aline MacMahon and Warren Hymer.

Mary Roberts Rinehart's famous story, "Miss Pinkerton," is vividly presented Wednesday by Joan Blondell and George Brent, who solve a baffling mystery that stumps even the best detectives.

"Silver Dollar," showing Thursday and Friday, is taken from history and pictures the Colorado boom lands with all their pageantry. The settlement of Denver by Edward G. Robinson as a fabulous adventurer, incredible lover and a maker of empires, is a real accomplishment in acting. Bebe Daniels and Aline MacMahon constitute the main feminine roles.

George O'Brien in Zane Grey's "The Golden West" is the feature presentation Saturday.

Look Out! He's Coming!

The above startling scene is taken from "King Kong," which promises more thrills than anything the screen has given in the past. It will show in Atlanta at the Fox theater, coming there within the next few weeks.

Barrymore, Billie Burke and Katherine Hepburn is the attraction at the Ponce de Leon theater Monday and Tuesday. Barrymore scores another great triumph in this story of love and death.

Adolphe Menjou and Mayo Methot make "The Night Club Lady," the picture for Wednesday, a stirring success. Adolphe Menjou, as Thatcher Colt, the master detective, solves one of the most baffling murder mysteries on record.

"Is My Face Red?" with Ricardo Cortez and Helen Twelvetrees is the feature for Thursday and Friday. Many faces turn red and many careers are wrecked by this inhuman scandal which lets nothing stand in the way of an interesting item for his novanaper.

"The Big Timer" with Ben Lyon and Constance Cummings is the attraction for Saturday. It is impossible for a prize fighter to live up to the standards set by a society girl and still hold his position in the boxing field.

West End To Show

"Congorilla" Monday

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson will present at the West End theater Monday their most amazing adventure in "Congorilla." The production of this screen epic took two long years in Africa. It is absolutely authentic and hair-raising, has terrifying drama, a

gripping comedy. For Tuesday, Jack Holt will appear in "Man Against Woman," a drama of "Madame Claude." Now, in "The White Sister," she wins all over again, yet even more thoroughly than ever before. The picture is perfection in every detail. And please, when you see it at the Grand, listen for the voice of May Robson as the Mother Superior. The old-time stars of stage can surpass all the newcomers in so far as tone and diction go. The Robson voice is like old wine, rich and warm and mellow.

By all means, see "The White Sister."

WEDNESDAY. A little later, at 11 o'clock to be exact, to the Fox.

Where we saw "Our Betters" with Constance Bennett starring. The picture is made from the play by Somerset Maugham. It is a satire on the wealthy American colony in London. They seem cleverly to combine all the more objectionable qualities of their nativity and their adopted nation. Constance Bennett, Louise Closser Hale and May

Robson. This, make a note, is a picture recommended to the full 100 per cent. Had I stars to bestow I would award a whole galaxy.

It is an all too rare occurrence to sit through an entire picture utterly entranced with its artistry and exquisite charm. Yet that was my experience Wednesday morning. Helen Hayes won by understanding admiration for her gifts as an actress, all over again. I believed my own accolade upon her lovely brow for her performance in "Farewell to Arms." And for "Madame Claude." Now, in "The

Gene Austin in Broadway Rhapsody
Coming to Erlanger Next Week

Such an outstanding array of stage stars and vaudeville headliners as is presented in "Broadway Rhapsody" has not been gathered together in one show in many days, and no little interest is carried to local theatergoers, who have for so long been "show hungry," in the announcement that it will be shown at the Erlanger theater throughout the week starting Monday, April 3, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Heading the list of featured stars is Gene Austin, who is already well known to most of the radio and record fans for his songs, and will be favorably remembered from his personal appearances here. Helen and Agnes Harrington are the sister team doing the kid numbers, comedy, lyrics and harmony. These two young ladies have had several years time as featured stars over RKO circuits. The leading lady is a petite little five-foot-two-inch blonde and her name is Gene Austin. She does a number of songs and specialty dances, and is well remembered from engagements with both Public and the Erlanger. The box office sale will start Thursday morning.

Sid Tracey and Bessie Hay, an English importation, are featured. This famous dancing team appeared for six months with Gene Austin last year in Europe.

"Hap" Farnell is the leading comic, and essays a "drunk" role, and is assisted in putting over his quips and gags by "Lot-a Mamma" Farnell, the queen of avoirdupois. Both Farnells have played to local audiences in the past. Helen and Agnes Harrington are the sister team doing the kid numbers, comedy, lyrics and harmony. PRICE REDUCTIONS
MADE BY LEONARD

DETROIT, Mich., March 25.—Substantial price reductions in its entire 1933 line of electric refrigerators have been placed in effect by the Leonard Refrigerator Company, in anticipation of increased volume.

The new low price scale, which is effective immediately, places the lowest cost model at $87, installed, plus freight, said by company officials to be the lowest price ever set on a standard, quality-built electric refrigerator with features formerly found only on more expensive models.

In commenting on the reductions, R. L. Petrie, general sales manager, pointed out that restored buyer confidence is already stimulating retail sales to such an extent that the company felt justified in passing back to its customers the savings this new volume will make possible.

"Unusual conditions now prevailing are responsible for this exceptional opportunity which is being offered persons interested in buying an electric refrigerator," he explained. "Raw materials in hand at both our Detroit and Grand Rapids factories have been purchased at the low cost which prevailed before the passing of the banking crisis. This fact, coupled with the sales volume which already has started to mount, makes possible manufacturing economies we are able to pass along to customers in the form of the present unprecedentedly low prices."

NEW YORK, March 25.—(P)—

Stocks made little pretense at activity today, sliding off slightly in the first hour but meeting better support in the second as shorts covered for the week-end.

On balance, the list showed that the downward trend of the current week had been maintained, for the closing average price was lower by two-tenths of a point. Turnover amounted to only 376,400 shares.

Individual stocks that have recently been under pressure found the market still against them, and there were a few additions to this group. American Telephone dropped a couple of points, then halted its loss. Du Pont bogged down 2 1/2 and closed 1-3/4 lower.

Allied Chemical, whose directors made action of the $150 quarterly dividend early next week regained two-thirds of a 1-1/2 point dip. The common share advanced $3.02 1/2.

Procter & Gamble, American Can, Westinghouse, National Biscuit and some of the coppers were down fractions at the close. The farm and beverage groups were firm.

Freight Loadings Gain.

Rails moved narrowly. Freight loadings for the week ending March 18 were 11,590 cars above the previous total, which was for banking holiday week. Shipments of merchandise and grains were higher, though fuel traffic declined in conformance with seasonal trends. Carrier shares averaged fractionally lower, but their reaction was higher, though fuel traffic declined in conformance with seasonal trends. Carrier shares averaged fractionally lower, but their reaction was higher, though fuel traffic declined in conformance with seasonal trends.

Financial interest now centers almost exclusively in Washington where congress faces a calendar of legislation embodying the administration's anti-depression program. Railroads are expected to bring prominently in this budget, with the development of a scheme for a national "co-ordinator" who would have the power to assume, at least for a time, the first steps toward repealing the recapitalization of the interstate commerce commission under the C. C. jurisdiction. Both these proposals were advocated by the national transportation committee.

Affected by Banks.

Brokers assume that security markets have been affected to some extent by liquidation of assets of closed banks, though the extent of such selling at this time is regarded as somewhat problematical. With buyers obviously in a cautious mood, absorption of even light offerings is being handled in large measure by professional traders. Public participation is believed to be small.

Foreign Markets.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

LONDON—German banks closed unaffected on the stock exchange owing to uncertainty in outlook while British railroads were slightly firm. Trading was at a low level and there were few changes in quotations. International issues were steady and the market closed quiet.

BERLIN—Prices quiet, the market was firm throughout the session.

PARIS—Prices of the house opened weak. Renten declined considerably and the tendency of the market was generally bearish.

Pennsylvania Rubber Reports Net Profit On 1932 Operations

JEANNETTE, Pa., March 25.—In sharp contrast to the doleful financial figures emerging from tire company directorates, was the announcement today by W. O. Rutherford, president of the Pennsylvania Rubber Company, manufacturers of Pennsylvania tires, tubes, tennis balls, bicycle tires, molded goods, play balls and rubber specialties, that company operations for 1932 show a satisfactory net profit.

This disclosure came at the regular meeting of the board of directors. The detailed financial statement is to be released after the annual meeting.

Asked to assign a fundamental reason for Pennsylvania's splendid showing, in a year that will always be recorded as one of the most dismal in the industry's history, Mr. Rutherford replied:

"To four things. Keeping at the job. Keeping our heads. Keeping out of industrial controversies. Keeping faith—with the merchants, the public, our stockholders, the employees and the community that looks to us for performance of a product and profitable participation from it."

Reviewing company activities during 1932, Mr. Rutherford said that conspicuous progress was noted in the company's plan of diversification.

While it is true with Pennsylvania, as with the rubber industry, that the tire division represents the major portion of its business, since the inception of the company it has been manufacturing molded rubber goods and a great many additional items which are generally considered as mechanical rubber goods. Mr. Rutherford has devoted considerable attention to the rejuvenation and development of these lines.

Three departments—tennis balls, bicycle tires and play balls and toys, showed new all-time sales peaks—almost forgotten words in these times. In fact, we have climbed to leadership in the production of certain items.

New Deal Brings Immediate Sales To Auto Dealers

DETROIT, March 25.—The almost unanimous support that America has given President Roosevelt in his readjustment program and the present confidence and optimism of general business, has been reflected in increased automobile sales during the past week.

This was asserted yesterday by Roy Peed, general sales manager of the De Soto Motor Corporation. Peed, with his thousands of De Soto dealers in all sections of the United States, is in an ideal position to feel the business pulse of the nation, as any buying trend is almost immediately transmitted to him through his dealers and field organization.

"It's one thing to talk about prosperity, but it's another to have actual orders in hand," Peed stated yesterday. "And if the reports and orders that I have been receiving from De Soto dealers for the past week is a true indication, I'd say that there is real cause for optimism."

"Other towns in the northwest that have never before placed orders for spring shipments this early in the year are wiring us to rush them literally carloads of cars."

"I believe that the events of the past few weeks have had a beneficial effect upon America and America's businessmen. Confidence is being restored. And the general public is fast realizing that money is worth only the good things that it will bring—that it pays its highest dividend in enjoyment and useful appreciation through the medium of a new automobile."

Light Chevrolet Gets Enthusiastic Public Response

DETROIT, March 25.—A surprising public response to the first showing of new Chevrolet "Standard Six" models last Saturday was disclosed here in wires from dealers received by H. J. Klingler, vice president and general sales manager of the company.

Despite the existence of a national bank holiday, dealers almost uniformly reported attendance beyond expectations and all reported retail sales in limited volume, many deals involving payment in gold or bills of the old large-size denomination.

More than 400 unsolicited wires came from dealers everywhere, and the tenor of all, Mr. Klingler said, revealed the field force confident of a sharp increase in sales as soon as banks reopen and appreciation of the company's decision to go ahead with its announcement despite the unsettled financial condition.

The dealer at Cleveland, Ohio, wired that the "Standard Six" introduction created the only excitement here in two weeks. Constant stream of visitors flowed through showrooms first day.

One Buffalo dealer reported 6,000 showroom visitors and 15 orders; another 1,500 people, 65 appraisals and five orders. One Philadelphia dealer sold three standard and two master models the first day; another at Richmond, Va., had 1,000 visitors, made 68 demonstrations and took three orders for standard and one for master models.

At Reading, Pa., two orders were taken the first day and York reported five orders the first day. At Evansville, Ind., one dealer sold three cars and delivered two the first day. A Charlotte, N. C., dealer had 4,000 people, and one at Charleston, W. Va., reported good crowds and three sales.

One Atlanta dealer had more than 1,000 people, made 300 demonstrations and 50 appraisals, and another said "public interest and attendance exceeded our expectations."

Lenoir, N. C., reported not one single criticism of the new car; Delhi, N. Y., reported twice as many people as expected, and Oneida wrote three orders. On the west coast the earthquake interfered seriously with the announcement in southern California, but Portland, Oregon, reported attendance, appraisals and sales almost up to the announcement of the master line in December.

C. J. ALFORD JR. OPENS AUTOMOBILE BUSINESS

C. J. Alford Jr., formerly of Carrollton, Ga., has opened a new and used car business at 23 Alexander street, N. E.

Mr. Alford has been in the automobile business in Georgia for several years and will give his present business the benefit of his wide experience. He will buy and sell used cars.

Portable Benches Used in Ford Dealers' Shops

Above shows the portable tool and work benches designed by Ford engineers and used by their dealers in all sections. These benches enable the service man to take his tools to any part of the building, besides being right at hand where work is carried on, eliminating much lost time going from bench to bench to secure proper tools. Above, made in the shop of Ernest G. Beaudry Motor Company, shown left to right: J. A. Wells, shop foreman; Paul Burks, C. V. Clark, and W. W. Jones, service manager, with a part of this equipment used in their shop.

Prior Tire Puts in Accessory Line

In keeping with their proposed expansion program, the Prior Tire Company, local distributors for the Hood line of tires, have revamped their offices and store located at the corner of Peachtree and Pine streets, to offer motorists a complete line of accessories and parts. Above is an interior view, showing a part of the improvements they have made which add materially to the appearance and give much added floor space over the previous arrangement.

New Company To Buy and Sell Used Cars

An important announcement is made by officials of the newly organized Adair-Levert Company, located at 265 Peachtree street, of the removal of the activities of the company to the new store shown in the above photograph.

The company is the outgrowth of the Fulton Industrial Company, whose years of growth in handling automobile refinancing necessitated their moving into larger and more adequate quarters. Here they will carry on the business of buying and selling used cars, as well as that of the Fulton Industrial Company.

United States Rubber Co. To Make Only High Grade Tires

United States Rubber Company announces a radical change in its entire manufacturing, distributing and selling policy of U. S. tires. The change, company officials believe, will serve to eliminate much of the confusion, waste and bad practice in the industry and will benefit directly the consumer, dealer, manufacturer and stockholder. The company statement reads:

"Effective immediately, the company will distribute through its dealers two high quality passenger car tires and one high quality truck tire, U. S. Royal heavy service.

"It has been the common practice for many years in the tire industry to build a multiplicity of tire lines of various grades and prices. The new policy of the United States Rubber Company means the elimination of all over-lapping and duplicating of grades and prices.

"The company holds the view that the downward trend of prices has eliminated the necessity of more than

Crackers Release Eiseman and Wise in Reduction Program

Remember the story of the Irishman who came to this country and got a job carrying a hod? He laughed and laughed because the bricklayer did all the work. All the Irishman did was carry the brick up several floors. Queer people, these Americans.

It was a hod of brick, several thousand of them, that made Jumping Joe Savoldi, the rasser who was once the best full-back Notre Dame ever had, the man he is.

He had an uncle named Uncle John—"Honest John." And Uncle John was a bricklayer. The story that Jumping Joe tells is that Uncle John could lay 4,000 brick per hour and that he, Jumping Joe, carried the brick in the hod and up the ladder.

When Joe Savoldi, a young Eye-Italian, went to school at Three Oaks, Michigan, he had enough brick muscle to bust open the Michigan high school lines. He busted them so fervidly and so loudly that the noise reached all the way down to South Bend, Indiana.

And so Joe showed up at South Bend and began to crack lines for Knute Rockne, the Dane. (What a genius that man was to take Italian kids, Jewish kids, Polish kids, Swedish kids, and the Irish and make a great team out of them.)

It developed one day, not so long before the big game on the coast in 1930, that Jumping Joe Savoldi was married. And so he resigned from school, which forbids undergraduates to be married, and played pro football for awhile.

He was soon interested in wrestling. He went to school, learned his lessons and came out. In two years he has become one of the really good showmen of the game.

The ladies in the audience always go "Ahhhhhhhhhh" when he strips off the robe and walks to the center of the ring, showing one of the most perfect physiques in all athletics. He has the dark, olive skin the Italians have and he wears white trunks (a new pair every match) to set off his skin. Oh, he is plenty smart, is Jumping Joe Savoldi.

"Rassling is a smart game, a smart game," he says.

At any rate, after all the pictures we've seen of athletes chopping down synthetic trees, or running down synthetic roads, it is a relief to find one who actually lugged a hod up ladders.

HARK! HARK! THE DOGS DO BARK.

The Atlanta Crackers, who have secreted themselves far from the madding crowd in the privacy of Mobile, Alabama, will return this week to give the home folks a chance to look at what has been done in about one month of training on the bay.

The home folks to date have been waiting patiently for the show. They are not yet kicking their heels together or doing any sensational gyrations. They are waiting, having more than a modicum of faith in Charley Moore and Wilbert Robinson.

The Crackers fans were fed on hollow promises for so many years that a great deal of hostility was engendered for baseball. It is to the credit of the present owners and officials that they have dissipated most of this. The fans are willing to be shown. Charley Moore has made himself a brand-new infield. It contains but one of last year's outfit, Buster Chatham remaining at short. The others are new. Pete Susko, who first-based for Birmingham; Red Rollings, who is a veteran third baseman with major and Southern league experience, and Wally Dashiell, the veteran Chattanooga infielder, make up the infield.

THE GAMBLING MAN.

Charley Moore is revealed as a gambling man by the makeup of his outfield. He is sticking two recruits in there, Duck McKee, who played in a few games last year for Atlanta, and Freddie Sington, who was in the Mid-Atlantic league as its leading hitter.

The outfield does not look as strong as several about the league, notably Chattanooga's, Nashville's or New Orleans', yet the rookies may come through. Moore is evidently gambling a strong infield against a rookie outfield. It is not such a bad gamble at that.

Atlanta fans may bank on Charley Moore. Baseball is his life blood. In fact in a recent examination it was found that the blood cells in Charley Moore's veins are shaped like baseballs. He has been one of the few modern baseball players to possess the old-time idea—that the chief idea of baseball was to win ball games and not draw the monthly check. I do not mean to say that he does not call at the office for his check but he puts the ball games first.

BOBBY JONES' BALL PLAYER.

There is one ball player on the Cracker squad who really belongs to Bobby Jones, the golf champion, although the title is vested in the ball club and always has been. He is a good ball player, too, and one that was held over from last season for duty this summer.

The story of it is this—Bobby Jones was one of several Atlantans who were persuaded to align themselves with what was already a sinking ship. They did not know it until they were in. All their efforts to save it proved to be in vain. It was too far gone for anything but the bankruptcy courts.

But Bobby Jones was vice president and he could not take the losing club with any satisfaction. There came a time when there was no more money to finance the club. A player was needed badly to fill a certain position. Bobby Jones scouted around, located a good one, and paid $5,000 out of his own pocket for the ball player and put him on the club. It was a great gesture of sportsmanship. It was a sworn secret last year but now, I suppose, it can be told.

GEORGIA HAS NO LUCK.

Georgia produced the world's greatest baseball player and the world's greatest golfer in Ty Cobb and Bobby Jones respectively. But in the prize ring the old state doesn't do so well. Only Tiger Flowers, the Georgia Deacon, has won a major ring title. Godwin and Striffling failed to cash in on chances at the light-heavyweight and heavyweight championships.

Grant and Lott To Play In Exhibition Saturday

Two outstanding tennis stars on the clay courts, Bryan Grant Jr., winner of the national title in 1930 and runner-up last year, and George Lott Jr., of Chicago, the 1932 winner, will play an exhibition match on the Atlanta Tennis Club courts next Saturday afternoon.

The match marks the first appearance here this year of a nationally-known star and brings together the finalists in the 1932 clay court championship.

Lott was ranked second in 1931 and Grant ranks 13th among the national stars.

Grant will welcome another chance to meet Lott, who defeated him at Memphis for the national crown and also in Florida for an invitation title during the winter.

Jack Simpson, president of the Atlanta Tennis Club, announced Saturday that arrangements are being made to care for hundreds of spectators and a small admission will be charged.

ED FALLENSTIN HOLDS YANKEES TO TWO BLOWS

Braves Beat World Champions, 4-2, Behind Good Hurling.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 25.—(AP)—Ed Fallenstein, formerly with the Phillies, today held the New York Yankees to two blows in a game as the Boston Braves defeated the world champions, 4 to 2. The victory was the Braves' first in seven games over the Yankees.

Fallenstein, signed by the Braves as a free agent this year after being out of organized baseball last year with a broken hand, pitched a no-hit game when Werber doubled and Ruth singled in the ninth to count for one run. The Yankees tallied their other run in the sixth on a walk, an error and two outfield flies.

The Braves scored three of their runs off Jablonowski, who pitched six innings, and the other off Duke, who finished the game.

Score by innings: 001 200 100—4 8 1 New York Yankees: 000 001 001—2 2 1 Fallenstein and Spohrer, Jablonowski, Duke and Dickey.

A's WIN.

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 25.—(AP)—The slugging Philadelphia Athletics battered two Newark Bears pitchers for 14 hits and an 8-to-3 victory in a training camp game today.

After showing four and three runs across in the fifth and sixth innings, the A's eased up somewhat, content to rest on their laurels.

Tim McKeithan twisted his left knee after pitching four innings for the American leaguers, and retired in favor of Gower. Gower pitched the last two innings.

Score by innings: 000 000 100—3 14 3 Athletics (A.): 000 000 200—3 5 3 Newark Bears: 000 000 000—0 0 0 McKeithan, Gower and Madjeski; Meador, Mamou and Hargreaves, Hershberger.

CARDS BEAT DODGERS.

MIAMI, Fla., March 25.—(AP)—With Bill Hallahan and Jim Mooney pitching four-hit ball, the St. Louis Cardinals turned back the Brooklyn Dodgers, 2 to 1, today.

The Dodgers scored their only run in the fourth off Hallahan, while the Cards counted twice after Ray Lucas, a rookie, had relieved Carroll in the sixth. Singles by Charley Wilson and Joe Medwick plus an infield out gave the Cards the tying run.

Allen's double, Pepper's bunt and a long fly produced the other tally in the eighth.

Del Bissone made his first appearance of the year, playing first base for the Dodgers in the eighth inning. He made one hit and in fielding showed no trace of the leg injury which kept him out of the game last year.

Score by innings: 000 001 100—2 9 1 Cardinals: 000 000 000—0 0 0 Hallahan, Mooney and J. Wilson; O'Farrell, Carroll, Lucas and Pichich, Sakeroff.

REDS.

TAMPA, Fla., March 27.—(AP)—The Cincinnati Reds went into the movies today, to let the folks back home know that they're really putting up a pre-season scrap to get somewhere in the National league this year.

Talkies of a three-hour practice session were taken for home consumption.

Walter Miller, left-hander formerly with Cleveland and the St. Louis Browns, worked out with the club, and it was indicated he may be signed as a relief pitcher.

SENATORS.

BILoxi, Miss., March 25.—(AP)—The Washington Senators broke camp tonight for a protracted series of exhibition games during the pre-season trip back toward the national capital. Today's game with the Cleveland Indians here was rained out.

Manager Joe Cronin, who has been dissatisfied with his batting order, decided to split it again for tomorrow's game with the Birmingham Barons. First-baseman Kuhel was put into the second spot, following Meyer. Cronin put himself in the cleanup position, just behind Manush and with the heavy hitters, Goslin and Schulte, in the fifth and sixth places.

RED SOX WIN.

ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, MARCH 26, 1933.

SIXTEEN RACES ARE SCHEDULED FOR LAKEWOOD

Season To Open Monday, April 10, With Four Races.

Sixteen races, with some of the outstanding thoroughbreds in the country entered, have definitely been scheduled for the spring running horse races, slated for Lakewood park, during the week of April 10, according to Mike Benton, president of the Southeastern Fair Association, sponsor of the movement.

It will be the first running races that Atlanta has attempted in more than a dozen years and the program has been given official approval of Governor Eugene Talmadge and Mayor James L. Key, in addition to many of the city's leading businessmen and merchants.

The races have been set for Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, with only those horses that have won races during the three days eligible to participate in the grand finale.

Tuesday and Thursday were left open out of respect to the opening of the Southern and major league baseball schedules.

Monday, April 10, has been designated as opening day with two one-mile, a mile and one-eighth and a sprint of six furlongs booked as the features. Purses of $150 and $200 have been guaranteed for each of the 16 races.

Governor's Day will be observed on Wednesday, April 12, when Governor Talmadge and many of the state's outstanding citizens will be guests of honor. A feature of the Governor's Day program will be a mile and one-sixteenth race in which non-winners in 1933 or a race at a mile or over, will be the only eligibles.

Friday will be Atlanta Day and Mayor James L. Key, Governor Talmadge and many of the state's outstanding citizens will be guests of honor. A feature of Friday's races will be a mile and one-eighth race in which non-winners since September 1 are eligible.

Derby Day has been booked for Saturday and four of the best races of the entire program have been scheduled for the closing.

Officials of the fair association were reassured Saturday that some 200 horses will be here for the week's racing and entries have been received for more than 100 already. Others are expected during the next few days.

Miss Orcutt Again Wins Title

PINEHURST, N. C., March 25.—(UP)—For the third successive year, Miss Maureen Orcutt, Englewood, N. J., veteran, won the annual north and south women's golf championship today, defeating Miss Bernice Wall, Oshkosh, Wis., 5 and 4.

The champion was two above par for the 14 holes. Her game consistently was too strong on the drive, and too steady around the greens, for the western challenger.

After reaching a 4-up lead at the turn, representing a 40 for 9, Miss Orcutt dropped the 10th by pitching too strong, but uncooked birdies on the next two holes to win against Miss Wall.

Five up with six to play, Miss Orcutt halved the 13th in 5 as her drive was trapped, and her second shot found the rough. The contest closed on the 14th with both players taking par 3s.

Lambert Is Freed In Father's Death

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 25.—(AP)—Samuel Lambert, Jr., was exonerated today by Coroner Edward E. Smith of the killing of his father, Dr. Fousa A. Lambert, nationally known football authority, last Tuesday.

Mrs. Dorothy Lambert, the boy's mother, told the coroner her husband was wounded fatally in a struggle with her son for possession of a revolver, following a family quarrel.

Mrs. Lambert said the boy's mother told the coroner her husband was wounded fatally in a struggle with her son for possession of a revolver, following a family quarrel.

Memphis Trades 'Star' for Prunes

SAN FRANCISCO, March 25.—(AP)—The question is "Who got the better of the deal?" The San Francisco Seals traded a case of mammoth Santa Clara prunes today to Memphis, of the Southern association, for Jack Fenlon, first baseman.

President Tom Watkins, of the Memphis club, telegraphed he was satisfied. Vice President Charles Graham, of the Seals, replied he was, too. Fenlon formerly played with Oakland.

Star Backstopper

Here is Eddie Phillips, who will do the main catching chores for the Crackers this season. Phillips, sent to Atlanta by the New York Yankees, is a first-class catcher and should be one of the outstanding backstoppers in the league, if not the best. His work in spring camp at Mobile has been great. Constitution photo.

TECH SWIMMERS BEAT GEORGIANS

ATHENS, Ga., March 25.—Georgia Tech swimmers, Southern Conference champions, decisively defeated the aquatic stars of the University of Georgia here today, 52-32, in the Georgians' first defeat of the year.

Charley Wagner, Tech, conference 100-yard backstroke champion, turned in a magnificent dash to defeat Hutch Hodgson, Georgia backstroke star, in the most one-sided sprint of the meet.

Harry Stover, Tech captain, splashed to a 10-4 victory over Captain Morton Hodgson, of Georgia, in the 40-yard free style, and triumphed in the fancy diving, but Hodgson came back to take the 220 free style from Stover and Lige, of Tech. Stover took the 100-yard free style to chalk up 3 points to lead the meet.

It was Georgia's first defeat in three starts. She chalked up two wins over Furman and Emory University in previous meets.

The summaries:

Emory Net Squad Plans Seven Matches

Emory University will open its 1933 intercollegiate tennis schedule with a match against Davidson College April 6 on the courts at Emory.

Emory had a very successful season last year, winning every match but the one with the University of Alabama. The schedule this year is the most difficult ever arranged, according to the student managers.

Seven matches have already been arranged and negotiations are under way for matches with The Citadel, Wheaton and Guilford, all of which will probably be signed. The schedule as announced follows:

Davidson, April 6; Furman, April 7; Kentucky, April 11; Furman, April 21; Alabama, April 22; Tennessee, April 28; Sewanee, April 29; Citadel, May 5 (tentative).

All matches will be played in Atlanta, at either Dobbs or Dewey courts at Emory.

Mellon Horse Wins Carolina Cup Race

CAMDEN, S. C., March 25.—(AP)—Pink Tipped, chestnut mare, owned by Richard K. Mellon, of Pittsburgh, today won the Carolina cup steeplechase, three miles over timber on the famous Springdale course of the Camden Hunt Club.

ELECTED.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 25.—(UP)—Francis P. Wall, of New York University, was today elected president of the College Swimming Coaches' Association of America, succeeding Matt Mann, of Michigan.

South Atlantic May Open Again

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 25.—(AP)—Advocates of league baseball will meet here Monday to discuss possibility of reviving the South Atlantic league.

Representatives from Columbia, Greenville, Macon, Spartanburg and Savannah are expected to attend. Cliff Farr, president of the Georgia Carolina semi-pro league, who represented Augusta at the recent Columbia meeting, says he's not interested in professional ball for this season.

Joe Kirkwood, New York trick shot artist, who finished the second round only one lick behind the mighty Hagen, was in fourth place with 287, and two strokes to the rear of him came "Wild Bill" Mehrlorn, of New York, with a 72-hole total of 289.

COHEN'S HORSE WINS FEATURE

NEW ORLEANS, March 25.—(AP)—Showing fine form on a muddy track after the heavy going had made him the favorite in the betting, Colonel Hatfield, owned by M. B. Cohen, clinched an enviable season of stake winnings today with a victory in the $5,000 Louisiana Derby at Fair Grounds race track.

Given a clever ride by Jockey Carl Meyer, Colonel Hatfield came home in a neck in front of the mighty Hagen, who finished second with 287, and two strokes to the rear of him came "Wild Bill" Mehrlorn, of New York, with a 72-hole total of 289.

The signing of Goff creates a real outfield problem for the Smokies due to a rookie rule. Knoxville will use a rookie in the outfield, leaving Manager Tommy Taylor, Norbett, Tange-man and Waddy to fight it out for two positions.

An exhibition game between Knoxville and Toledo, scheduled for today, was postponed until Sunday because of wet grounds.

Georgia, Clemson Game Rained Out

CLEMSON, S. C., March 25.—University of Georgia's baseball representatives came here today to play the Clemson College Tigers in the first game of the season, but rain prevented the contest.

The season's record crowd of more than 10,000 jammed into Fair Grounds for the feature, over a mile and a furlong, when the rain retreated in favor of brilliant sunshine. Ten school three-year-olds started.

Colonel Hatfield, winner of the recent derby trial handicap, paid on $2 mutuel certificates $4.40 win, $3 place and $2.80 show. Spiceman returned $0.20 place and $5 show and Gyro $4.80 show.

The also-rans behind Bobbed were Eba B., Strideaway, Beefsteak, Barry, Ennis and Ruckus.

Beefsteak set the early pace with Colonel Hatfield in close pursuit, but on leaving the back stretch the latter moved out a length and a half in front of Spiceman, which made a gallant but unsuccessful stretch drive to overtake the winner. Gyro made up a lot of ground in the last few furlongs and was closing in strong on the leader at the judges' stand.

Southwestern Cities Plan Minor League

LONGVIEW, Texas, March 25.—(AP)—Representatives from east Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and Jackson, Miss., will come here tomorrow to discuss with J. Alvin Gardner, president of the Texas league, formation of a minor baseball league.

Cities named in the proposed circuit were Tyler, Texas; Longview, Texas; Shreveport, La.; Jackson, Miss.; and two or possibly four others. Baton Rouge, La.; Alexandria, La.; Texarkana and El Dorado, Ark.; and Paris, Waco and Corsicana, Texas, were invited to send representatives to the meeting.

ROSTER DOWN TO 21 PLAYERS; FOUR MUST GO

Neisler Being Groomed as Understudy to Phillips Behind Bat.

MOBILE, Ala., March 25.—The guillotine fell upon two more Atlanta Crackers today when Manager Moore announced the respective release of Bill Eiseman, catcher, and Archie Wise, rookie pitcher.

Eiseman was the club's regular catcher at the close of the season. He is former Syracuse University three-letter athlete as Phillips' understudy.

Wise, a youngster, was considered to be in need of more pitching experience by Moore. Wise has a sore arm. He showed flashes of promise down here, but the Crackers are already loaded on rookies.

Commenting on Eiseman's release, Moore stated that he could not possibly use the ex-Birmingham receiver, since he had played the role of a pinch hitter for the first start with Freddy Neisler, St. Louis boy and protégé of Joe Guyon, and Johnny Brock, ex-Cracker, as Phillips' understudy.

These two releases reduce the Crackers' squad to 21 players, four more of which must be let go by the season's opening. Moore is trying to find a pinch runner for McCarter, 18-year-old shortstop from St. Paul, sandlot, in the belief that the lad has lots of future promise. He may send him to Johnny Dobbs at Charlotte if Johnny can use him. McCarter is extremely fast, has a good arm and is learning to hit ball.

The roster is now reduced to Phillips and Neisler, catchers; Rollings, Leaskowski, McCarter, Chalm, Dashiell and Snoko, infielders; Weis, Bonowitz, Sington and McKee, outfielders; Blithen, Messenger, Hasty, Hearn, Kleinhaus, May, Casey, Henry and Carriethers, pitchers.

Altogether 11 players have been released this week and five more must go. Despite rain today Manager Moore had the battery men out for a short drill.

Moore probably will keep two of his young pitchers around the ball park this summer if he cannot place them. He has four likely young choppers in Max Butcher, Hugh Casey, Leonard Mayo and Kleinhaus. He plans to carry two or possibly three of them on the roster.

The Crackers play one more game here tomorrow against the Kraft semipro team before breaking camp Monday. Kleinhaus and Messenger will pitch.

Moore Cognizant of Off Field.

MOBILE, Ala., March 25.—When Charley Moore says, with a certain amount of conservatism, that he will send the Atlanta Crackers into a first division berth this year, he does so with full cognizance of the class of the field with which he must compete.

The young pilot of the Crackers is making his debut in a league that literally sparkles with managerial talent. All but two of his opponents—Tommy Taylor, at Knoxville, and Harry Strohm, at St. Louis—have won one or more pennants.

Clyde Milan, the manager of Birmingham's Barons, won in 1931 by one of the widest margins in league history and also capped the Dixie series.

Larry Gilbert, returning to the helm at New Orleans, won in 1926 and repeated in 1927.

Doc Prothro, at Memphis, crashed through with his Chickasaws in 1930. Bert Nichol, who boosted his Chattanooga Lookouts home last season and then captured the Dixie series hunting over the Beaumont Exporters, has three berths to his credit. He previously won at Mobile in 1922 and at Atlanta in 1925.

Memphis and Chattanooga, first flight teams, are the two teams to be strong contenders again this season, while Nashville has admittedly strengthened greatly its fourth-place team of last year. Little Rock, which finished third last season, should be no weaker this year, while Tommy Taylor, a new man like Charley Moore, is expected to lead the St. Louis Browns into the last place Knoxville Smokies.

The New Orleans club, which lost $40,000 last year, is expected to return to power under Larry Gilbert. The latter plugged a weak gap in his infield when he acquired the capable Eddie Moore from Dallas to play third and to replace Denny Galehouse, a big right-lander, from Fort Fleming of the Eastern league. Pete Fleming, a former teammate of Freddie Sington at Alabama, is a prize rookie in the outfield, while Johnny Quillier, another college boy, is improved by three seasons of in and out of the game.

Memphis will have the best utility players in the league with Frank Brazil, Alvin Reese and Herschel Robo, who can play any position, and the remnants of a strong pitching staff.

"I know I'm on the spot," says Charley Moore, "but I've been there before and a strange league is nothing new to me. I've won the league one every year since I started managing."

Reminders of Atlanta's exhibition schedule:

WALTER HAGEN IS OPEN WINNER

CHARLESTON, S. C., March 25.—(AP)—Walter Hagen, the old shot-maker from Detroit, tangled another tournament scalp from his belt today by bagging the $2,500 Charleston open tournament and its $700 first money with a 72-hole score of 282.

"The Hag," leader at the end of the last three rounds, came out in front only after a grueling struggle with Henry Picard, Charleston pro, who lost a chance to win an open on his own course from a representative American field by only one stroke.

Picard shot two sub-par rounds of 69 each to finish close on the heels of Hagen with a grand total of 283. His 69 in the final round was two strokes better than Hagen's 71, even par.

Three strokes back in third place came Craig Wood, the long-driving giant from Deal, N. J., with 282. Wood turned in three rounds of better than par golf after a bad start on the opening day.

Druid Hills opened its annual golf tournament season with a one-day medal handicap round Saturday afternoon in which four players tied for first place with net scores of 70. They were Bill Terrell, C. J. Holdich, Hunter Perry and J. C. Bowen.

C. V. Rainwater and John Bothamley Jr. finished in the second and third places with 71. The first tie was with a 74.

Others who finished well among the leaders were Dr. C. M. Barron, R. K. Rambo, E. H. Hancock, J. H. Ewing, R. H. Dobbs, Joe Horacek, Forrest Fowler, Dr. J. Rowan, Harry Sommers, Dr. M. D. Huff, J. B. Martin, Jimmy Wilson, Colonel Meehan and Major Ely.

Honors Shared in Capital Meet.

Both players turned in cards of 72, one stroke above par, and it was the third successive Saturday in which Beckett has been in the lead.

NOVEL EVENT FOR DOG SHOW IS ANNOUNCED

Children's Class for Handlers 15 Years Old Is Added.

Spectators at the Atlanta Kennel Club's dog show, which is to be held at the Lullwater building, 447 West Peachtree, on April 7 and 8, were promised a new and novel event Saturday by officials who announced a children's class as a special event. The announcement immediately brought the children's class top billing in the interest of local dog lovers, who expect it to be a real feature of the program.

The children's class will be open to handlers 15 years old and under and will be judged solely on the way in which the youngsters handle and exhibit their charges. The quality of the dog being shown will not enter into the judging at all. The only qualifications set by A. K. C. officials are that the dog must be owned by a member of the child's family and that it must be entered in one of the other regular classes of competition in the show.

SPECIAL FEATURE. Another special feature announced Saturday was that of the acceptance of an invitation to help officiate by Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Leach, of Chicago. Mr. Leach is to act as superintendent of the dog show, which is to be held on April 4 and 5 and will drive here after the completion of that show. He is one of the nation's best-known show judges and has handled many of the best dogs each year. Atlanta leaders are especially anxious to make the coming local show a truly first-class event in order to please his critical eye.

Plenty of fine entries and close competition are apparently assured today in that drive for top-dog ranking. A. K. C. officials last week mailed out some 1,000 entry blanks to an initial list and later filled a number of requests from leading kennels in the city. Dixie and the nation which were not on that list. Headquarters have been set up at 72 Houston street, with Mrs. Hackman in charge. The telephone number is Walnut 0828, and information may be had by either calling or writing to the office.

HARD AT WORK. Special classes have also been hard at work. The Dixie Chow Club, promoting the Chow-Chow exhibits, has lined up a full list of attractive trophies and prizes and has been in touch with most of the country's leading kennels. The organization has been assured a fine entry list which will include some of the best specimens in the country and making the battle of Old China's magnificent breed another real feature of the program.

Severely handicapped children have also been pressing for prizes and entries and have also been assured a good assortment of trophies which will be given to some of the best terriers in America.

Sington Is Largest Outfielder in Southern

Former Star Alabama Athlete One of Biggest Players in Organized Baseball.

By Jimmy Jones.

MOBILE, Ala., March 25.—Since it is becoming more apparent each passing day that Freddie Sington, the 23-year-old 220-pound Alabamian, has made the Cracker ball club, the boys have begun conjecturing on the possibility that he not only will be the largest outfielder in the Southern league this year, but one of the largest in baseball.

Clark Griffith, president of the Washington club, who has observed and liked the work of the big, active Sington in the left field against his Senators, says he can think of but very few outfielders in the American league offhand that are to be compared to Sington in avoirdupois.

He mentions Smead Jolley, who has been turned into a catcher by the Boston Red Sox, Babe Ruth, of the New York Yankees, and Bob (Fats) Fothergill, who performed with the White Sox last year. Baby Doll Jacobson, who formerly pastimed with the St. Louis Browns, was built on the Sington chassis.

Other expert observers, including young Joe Cronin, the Washington manager, pointed out that Dale (Jumbo) Alexander, the Detroit first baseman, was a great deal heavier and not so agile as Sington. Young Uncle Wilbert Robinson, who did all his managing in the National league, remembers quite a few heavyweights that league who do not have the grace of the ponderous flegling in the Cracker outfit. He mentioned Don Hulse, the big first baseman of the Phillies, and Riggs Stephenson, veteran left fielder of the Chicago Cubs.

All of these players were well above 200 pounds, yet it does not seem to affect their chances in the big leagues. Alexander, Stephenson and Fothergill have been up a long fielder. Baby Doll Jacobson finally passed out after some good years.

Robinson, Moore and other baseball men who have watched Sington's actions closely, believe that he will eventually make a much better fielder than some of the big outfielders they have seen perform in higher class ball.

They are convinced that he is a better fielder right now than Smead Jolley, Stephenson and a few other big men to whom he was compared. In fact, he stacks up favorably with the best of the heavyweights mentioned in this respect, with the exception of Babe Ruth, who is quite a fielder as well as a hitter.

Bill Brennan, the white-haired umpire who is down here handling the Cracker exhibitions, makes a good point when he mentioned the fact that Sington always played football at his present weight and even he has been hit hard by the ends down the field time and time again.

"It is a mistake to try to reduce Sington's natural weight," comments Bill. "It weakens a fellow like him to get below 215, which is about his football playing weight."

Since Sington is young and fairly fast on his feet, it stands to reason that he will eventually improve his play in all departments. Manager Moore thinks the big boy 100 per cent improved in his fielding already.

He made several plays in left field in the last game with Washington. He also has displayed a strong throwing arm in pegging to the bases.

Sington is one of the most conscientious, studious fellows you ever saw. He fairly lives the sport in which he is competing, whether football or baseball, and strives continuously to improve himself. At Alabama, he was an honor student, as well as an All-American football player. He started baseball as a pitcher under Hank Crisp, the Alabama coach, but was changed to an outfielder. "All he needs is plenty of work in three every day and he's going to get it this year," Manager Moore declared in discussing Sington.

TITLE AT STAKE. The Friendly Five Show, leading the league, plays the Old-Timers Monday for a second time. One game behind the old boys are Walter A. Guest and the Grand Dads.

One of the biggest upsets of the city league has been the spectacular showing of the Old-Timers. They made three out of the season, for they were not conceded a chance to finish in the money, but won the second place award in the first series and have been right around the top for the entire second series.

COMMERCIAL LOOP. The Commercial Loop Bowling League is having a close race. The Four & Austin lead with 20 wins and 10 losses. Wonder "5" is second and Hirsch Brothers are third. Hirsch Brothers and the other teams are also very much interested.

Brilliant pin spitting by Walter Lawson and Joe Dyer has kept the Four & Austin in the lead. Lawson and Dyer are doing a good job for the Wonder "5."

Alabama To Play Chattanooga Club

UNIVERSITY, Ala., March 25.—A game with Chattanooga, winner of the Southern league pennant last year, on March 31, has been added to the Alabama baseball schedule, it was announced today by Coach Henry Crisp.

In the opinion of fans, the addition of Chattanooga to the Tide schedule makes it the strongest "Bama" has had in many years. Alabama had already scheduled two other Southern league teams, Birmingham and Nashville.

In addition to these strong Southern league teams the Tide will play 16 conference tilts, four each with Georgia, Georgia Tech, Mississippi State and Ole Miss.

Tech High Field Day For Friday Postponed

The first annual field day planned by Tech High for next Friday will be postponed a week on account of the track being unfinished. A crew of 75 men have been busy for more than a month beautifying the grounds and putting the athletic field in good condition, and it will be another week before it will be ready.

Gold, silver and bronze medals will be given for the winners of the first three places in each event and every boy in school is eligible to run in any event. The list of events include the 100, 220 and 440-yard dashes, half-mile and mile run, 120 and 220 hurdles, pole vault, high jump, broad jump, shot put and discus.

JACKETS OF 1933 TO BE HEAVIER; MORE CAPABLE

Tech Coaches Have Veterans Back But Sophs Will Oust Some.

By Ralph McGill.

Mr. William Alexander, of Georgia Tech, who closed his football practice for spring on Friday last, announced yesterday a varsity squad of 47 which will report next fall for varsity equipment.

Mr. Alexander is going to be in the same relatively easy position as that which Citizen Herbert Hoover had prepared for the average American citizen. Mr. Hoover mustered something about a chicken in every pot and a car in every garage.

That is to say Mr. Alexander is going to have a senior and junior in every position and a sophomore in every pot getting seasoned for play. It is a most fortunate position in which to be and one which Mr. Alexander and his associates have not enjoyed for years. I do not mean Tech is to appear with a great team. But at last Tech has some material.

IMPROVED PLAY. There is not a great deal to say about the spring squad which would not come under the basic of pure supposition. One may mention better kicking, better passing, improved tackle and end play and all the rest of the vital statistics, but it is all pure supposition.

This much is known—the squad weighs more, has more experience, more speed and more guts. There is about all one could say about any squad.

Just what the boys will do next fall when the guns begin to shoot is another matter. I think they will do rather well. After four years of fighting odds and better material the Jackets will be able to step out next fall with something approaching an even chance.

GREAT COACHING. Let me pause in an annual tribute to Mr. Alexander and his aides. He and his coaches have done a great deal more than to go on than most any other set of coaches in Dixie, considering what they have had to face. There are coaches who have even less material and lighter material than Tech, but they did not have the schedule. And I doubt if any coach anywhere had fewer players with natural football ability than Mr. Alexander.

He has a veteran at every position. But some of those veterans are going to be upset. If Mr. Alexander will pardon me for selecting his team for him, I will insist that next fall's real games, if not the early ones, will find a sophomore at one of the tackle positions. There are several good tackles on the list. Gardner and Brady are the veterans.

And at least one sophomore will put up a nice contest for a varsity job. The other one will be held down by Bob Tharpe, a tackle for two seasons, who learned the flank duties quickly.

At the guards there is not much opportunity for a sophomore, although at some time next fall Georgia Tech is going to offer the only real test of guards in uniform. The Wilcox brothers from Tyler, Texas, Dave and John.

SEMI-NATURAL ABILITY. The veteran, Eddie Laws, the good-natured boy from Columbus, Miss., who made good in the city, should be a fine center. Tatum Lackey returns, but has plenty of competition from Morris, Warner, John Wilcox and another player. So, John Wilcox should prove to be the best center in some years. He came last fall and showed more improvement in the spring. As a player he will be a real "line" player.

Lyons, and Juniors Shaw and Brewer. And finally, we come to the backfield. It is there that the first material of guards in uniform. The Wilcox brothers from Tyler, Texas, Dave and John.

Receiver Appointed For Washington Post

WASHINGTON, March 25.—(AP)—Benjamin S. Minor, a Washington attorney, today was appointed receiver for the Washington Post.

The appointment was made by Justice Joseph Cox in District of Columbia supreme court after counsel for Mrs. Evelyn Walsh McLean, estranged wife of the former publisher of the newspaper, had informed the court she had been unsuccessful in her efforts to devise a plan for keeping the paper in the McLean family.

An effort to have Arthur Marks, business manager of the newspaper, appointed co-receiver, was unsuccessful. Justice Cox indicated, however, that Marks, and Ira Bennett, who is in charge of editorial work on the Post, should be retained in their present capacities.

Clothes Made of Empty Bags

At a dinner at the Atlanta Athletic Club Friday night, given by Bill Monsees and Clyde Scott, of the Savannah Sugar Refining Corporation, and J. E. Raley, shown left to right, to wholesale grocers and Atlanta newspaper men, a plan whereby millions of garments will be reclaimed from empty Dixie Crystals sugar bags was explained. The corporation uses over 10,000,000 yards of cotton cloth, made from Georgia cotton, in Georgia mills, in the manufacture of Dixie Crystals sugar bags. When washed and bleached, these make durable material for aprons, smocks, baby clothes, children's dresses, and overalls. To show the people what attractive clothes may thus be made, about sixty garments have been made up, and Mr. Monsees will spend the next two weeks exhibiting these to the local home demonstration agents, parent-teacher and relief organizations. Since this work was begun in Georgia a month ago, it has attracted national attention.

For thirty years before he held a political office was a brilliant student and teacher of the science of government and a recognized author of scholarly works on American history and government. They will gladly exchange stamps with those who write them sending stamps. And all that can be used will go to make the Roosevelt Collection.

The group will extend its activities all over the world by correspondence and exchange with patients in hospitals in every country overseas where they can find like interests. The hours and days will be shortened for them and the period needed for recovery to usefulness will not seem so long when they have their stamps and their Roosevelt Collection to work with.

Among the patients, there is one requirement for membership in the Warm Springs Stamp Club. Each member must contribute every month 10 different stamps, excluding the present U. S. issue of the 1-2, 1-2 and 3-cent values. The club will meet every two weeks at the Foundation at Warm Springs with a program of study and classification of the stamps received since the last meeting.

Every member of The Atlanta Constitution Stamp Club and every reader of the Stamp Corner should send in some of their duplicates without delay. Some of our stamps should find their way into the Franklin D. Roosevelt Collection.

Those who do not collect stamps may help by addressing an envelope "Warm Springs Stamp Club, Warm Springs, Ga." and putting in it every stamp, except the most common, they have.

This house has unusual features, including stairway entrances and the arrangement of a large court. The design and floor plans appear above.

It is better to build this house with the elevation shown in the illustration facing the street. When that is done, the visitor is greeted first by the semi-enclosed court, the possibilities of which are numerous. Depending on the owner's preference the garage wall may be carried on in stone, as a hedge, or part of one and part of the other.

The house is somewhat unusual in that one goes downstairs from the entrance hall and upstairs from either the dining or living room. Although there is no central hall, the last two rooms are separated by the small entry leading to the stair.

The kitchen fronts the court and looks into the garden behind the garage.

For thirty years before he held a political office was a brilliant student and teacher of the science of government and a recognized author of scholarly works on American history and government. They will gladly exchange stamps with those who write them sending stamps. And all that can be used will go to make the Roosevelt Collection.

The group will extend its activities all over the world by correspondence and exchange with patients in hospitals in every country overseas where they can find like interests. The hours and days will be shortened for them and the period needed for recovery to usefulness will not seem so long when they have their stamps and their Roosevelt Collection to work with.

Among the patients, there is one requirement for membership in the Warm Springs Stamp Club. Each member must contribute every month 10 different stamps, excluding the present U. S. issue of the 1-2, 1-2 and 3-cent values. The club will meet every two weeks at the Foundation at Warm Springs with a program of study and classification of the stamps received since the last meeting.

Every member of The Atlanta Constitution Stamp Club and every reader of the Stamp Corner should send in some of their duplicates without delay. Some of our stamps should find their way into the Franklin D. Roosevelt Collection.

Those who do not collect stamps may help by addressing an envelope "Warm Springs Stamp Club, Warm Springs, Ga." and putting in it every stamp, except the most common, they have.

The CONSTITUTION'S STAMP CORNER

By N. S. Noble

New Warm Springs Stamp Club

The newest stamp organization, which has come into the hobby from a humanitarian as well as a recreational viewpoint. Left to right, sitting, James Collins, Holyoke, Mass.; John Reiser, chairman, White Plains, N. Y.; William L. Van Nul, New Brunswick, N. J.; and Miss Mary Preston Sheffer, Marion, Va.; standing, Miss Natavidia Toste, San Juan, P.R.; Rico; Carl Sjostrom, Miami, Fla., and George Briggs, Augusta, Maine.

Stamp collectors, members of The Constitution Stamp Club and readers of the Stamp Corner, we make an announcement this morning which offers to stamp collectors all over the nation and the world the opportunity we all have been looking for—and which will mean to all of us the greatest opportunity in stamp collecting to prove just how worthwhile our hobby really is.

Down at Warm Springs, where President Franklin D. Roosevelt, himself a stamp collector, went several years ago when he was a victim of infantile paralysis, there has been formed a stamp group of the National Patients' Committee of the Warm Springs Foundation. It will be known as the Warm Springs Stamp Club.

Membership was started among the younger patients, but there are no age restrictions. All who become interested in stamp collecting may join this club. THE ROOSEVELT COLLECTION.

The group will build the Franklin Roosevelt Collection from stamps mailed in by collectors, clubs and societies, stamp magazines and dealers, from their duplicates, and from stamps they find in the course of their collecting.

While not stamp collectors themselves, are interested in helping the patients at Warm Springs.

In the hobby of stamp collecting, the "shut-in" always has appealed to those who gather stamps for recreation and pleasure. The "shut-in" finds in stamps a means of whiling away tedious hours. His thoughts are free from his pains and troubles, mental and physical, to the "shut-in" whenever collectors have learned of his worthiness and need.

John Reiser, chairman of the Warm Springs group, has asked through The Constitution that collectors who read this announcement send by mail to his club stamps which duplicate those they have in their collections, that clubs and societies pool their stamps and send them to Warm Springs.

Down at this place of affliction, where tortured minds and bodies are being reclaimed to lives of usefulness, just as President Roosevelt was reclaimed to the nation in its moment of greatest need, the members of the stamp group want to start correspondence with collectors and societies. They will gladly exchange stamps with those who write them sending stamps. And all that can be used will go to make the Roosevelt Collection.

The group will extend its activities all over the world by correspondence and exchange with patients in hospitals in every country overseas where they can find like interests. The hours and days will be shortened for them and the period needed for recovery to usefulness will not seem so long when they have their stamps and their Roosevelt Collection to work with.

Among the patients, there is one requirement for membership in the Warm Springs Stamp Club. Each member must contribute every month 10 different stamps, excluding the present U. The home was enchanting in its decoration of Easter lilies, ferns, smilax and palms. Baskets of Easter lilies stood on either side of the improvised altar formed by the steps leading up into the dining room. The doors leading into the dining room made an effective background adorned with Easter lilies, smilax, fern and tulips. Pots of Easter lilies completed the decorations in the living room where the ceremony was performed.

The radiant loveliness of the bride was enhanced by her wedding gown, which was worn by her mother 27 years ago. It was fashioned of radium satin with princess lace decorating the bodice and the full length sleeves, which were bouffant to the elbow. The wedding veil was held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms, originally worn by her maternal grandmother, then by her mother, the bride being the third generation to use the veil. The bride carried a Bible carried by her mother on the occasion of her marriage. Sprays of orchids decorated the moire-bound Bible. Her going-away costume was a three-piece street suit of Eleanor Blue with blouse of gray. Her spring model hat, of the same material, blue shoes, bag and gloves completed her costume.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Joe Herzfeld, was gowned in black chiffon. The bride's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Abe Weil, of Montgomery, Ala., wore black chiffon with lace trimmings. Her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Reuben Herzfeld, of Alexander City, was gowned in her costume of black chiffon.

Punch was served by Misses Marie Lanier, Louise Stanley and Mrs. John Barrow and Miss Lucy Lanier kept the bride's book.

tion receiving the most enthusiasm was that of Mrs. John M. Slaton, that the Georgia D. A. R. become a contributing patron of the Georgia bicentennial committee, the $250 necessary for this being quickly raised, the contribution of $25 from ex-Governor Slaton heading the list. This insures the name of the organization being perpetuated on the bronze tablet to be placed in state capitol. The resolutions in reference to change in flag code and those sent in from Edmund Burke chapter through Mrs. Rosa McMaster have been previously reported following the executive board meeting in Marietta. Resolution proposed by Mrs. Bun Wylie for indorsement of the bill now pending in congress that the United States navy be enlarged to strength allowed by London treaty; proposed by Mrs. Charles Akersman that the D. A. R. register disapproval of the recognition by the United States of the government of soviet Russia; proposed by Mrs. Howard McCall and Mrs. A. R. Redwine that the Georgia D. A. R. adopt the plan of contributing a penny a day a member to reduce the debt on Constitution Hall, urging that the chapters co-operate in this.

Mrs. Russell William Magna, president general, in her talk to the Officers' Club, brought to attention that this debt like all debts made a few years ago bears a high rate of interest out of proportion to the present price of money; Mrs. Magna has maneuvered by borrowing to reduce this rate somewhat but it is yet high and it behooves the D. A. R. in behalf of good business to reduce the debt itself as fast as possible; proposed by Mesdames John M. Slaton, Lucius McConnell, Thomas Mell, Bun Wylie, Howard McCall, Max Land that the D. A. R. do petition the Georgia assembly to enact the bill pending that the department of archives and history be transferred to the state board of regents and that this department be permanently located in Rhodes Memorial hall; proposed by Mrs. J. H. Nicholson, state historian, that the society mark the Ogilthorpe highway as soon as the George Washington highway has been completed; proposed by Mrs. Howard McCall and Mrs. Julian Jones that the speech of president general, Mrs. Magna, be mimeographed and sent to each chapter in the state; proposed by Mesdames Frances Brown, Chase, W. Daniel, Howard McCall, J. T. Dorsey and Tom Wood that chapters sending in reports for awarding of trophies include the number of members as so many trophies are given on a percentage basis; no doubt any chapter will see the need for this information and will comply in the future. All the foregoing resolutions were passed by the delegates assembled.

Mrs. Julian McCurry, state regent, requests that all state chairmen forward their reports to her as promptly as possible in order that she may compile her report for the national congress during the coming week.

The book plate committee, Mrs. E. W. Freeman, of Dublin, chairman, reports the Georgia bookplates finished. These plates, designed by Mrs. John S. Adams, of Dublin, and executed by Stephens Engraving Company, are works of art. Headed by a picture of Ogilthorpe, bearing the seal and shield of Georgia, the likeness of an Indian facing the figure of peace and liberty, entwined with Cherokee roses, the dates 1733-1933 surmounted by the Latin inscription, "anno patriae patriae" each line one of significance, they will be regarded with pride by Georgians and with admiration by others. All books sent to Memorial Continental Library from Georgia will be marked with these attractive bookplates, a result of Mrs. Adams' work as state librarian and of Mrs. Freeman as chairman of the committee.

Mrs. Bun Wylie, state chairman of national defense embodying education, the committee bespeaking really the keynote of the society, reported that there was expended by Georgia D. A. R. for this work during the past year, $15,252.

Mrs. R. J. Travis, chairman of making historic spots, reported that it had been the decision of the temporary committee appointed for the division of funds sent in for making historic spots, that the sum be divided as follows, $35 to state historian for marking Fort Heard in Wilkes, a like sum having already been contributed by Mrs. J. W. Nicholson, state historian, this cause; $35 to Birmingham chapter for marking road to Fort Recovery, and $25 to Governor John B. H. Emmet chapter, Savannah, for marking the Sunbury Trail.

Practically all chapters are co-operating in the celebration of Georgia bicentennial by carrying out the fine yearly program of study outlined by Mrs. Max Land, state chairman of historical programs and pageants.

A feature of the closing session of the state conference was the reception of a telegram of appreciation from Colonel Walter Scott, father of the president general, Mrs. Magna. This was sent in answer to a telegram sent by the conference to Colonel Scott, which was in the form of a beautifully worded poem composed by Mrs. Herbert Franklin, of Tennesse, beloved honorary state regent. Mrs. Franklin's poems of appreciation lend grace to D. A. R. gatherings.

Mrs. M. R. Redwine, chairman of Constitution hall, announced that contributions covering the cost of the table given in honor of the beloved state regent, Mrs. Julian McCurry, had been received. Pending receipt of these, however, payment will be made from state treasury as per resolution passed by conference.

Miss Sue Reid Vason, chairman of approved schools, stated that both the scholarships given to Kate Duncan Smith school in Alabama and to Young asse school in South Carolina had been completed. These scholarships, at the suggestion of Mrs. W. F. Dykes, first state vice regent, are named in honor of the state regent, the Richmond Walton McCurry scholarships; the first contribution to them was made by Mrs. Dykes and the remainder subscribed enthusiastically for the chapters by their representatives at executive board meeting in Marietta.

On June 14 there will take place, by the plan of Mrs. Magna, president general, at a Chicago exposition a parade of the D. A. R., each state having her flag borne by her representative. The beautiful Georgia flag of silk, presented to the D. A. R. at the Waycross conference as a gift from her by Mrs. John M. Slaton, through Mrs. Bun Wylie then state regent, will be carried for the Georgia D. A. R. by Mrs. Cooper, of Detroit, formerly Mrs. A. L. Wilkins, prominent in D. A. R. work in this state.

Mrs. J. L. Mims, state registrar, requests through a resolution that a card index system be used in the filing of papers going through the state registrar's office. As the late national ruling makes it necessary for all application and supplementary papers to pass through this office and as the records of these form a valuable genealogical collection it is hoped this can be done.

The suggestion that the time of meeting of the Sons and Daughters of the republic be allowed to conform to the convenience of the local situation made by Mrs. James I. Garral, chairman, was received and a resolution to this effect passed.

Georgia state banquet will be held during national conference in Washington at the Willard hotel at 6 o'clock Tuesday, April 18. Cover charge will be $3. For reservations address Mrs. Ruby C. Singleton, Southern Club, 1701 Massachusetts avenue, Washington, D. C.

Grady Hospital Auxiliary Meets On March 28

Organized clubwomen of Atlanta are showing a steadily increasing interest in the work of the Grady Hospital Auxiliary, according to announcement of Mrs. E. Stewart, acting president for Mrs. Louis J. Elsas, the president. The auxiliary meets at the nurses' home of the hospital on Tuesday morning, March 28, at 11 o'clock. The annual linen shower will be held on that day and members are reminded that a donation of linen, no matter how small, will be welcome. Wash cloths have been mentioned as a need of the wards.

Mrs. Howard W. Mason, ward chairman, reports the following clubs appointing Grady representatives: Women's Benefit Association, Mrs. T. C. Hellebrack, East Point; Women's Club, Mrs. T. F. Guffin, St. Luke's Auxiliary, Mrs. W. D. Summey; Council of Jewish Women, Mrs. Julius Goldsmith and Mrs. Maurice Solomon; West End Study Club, Mrs. Willis Everett and Mrs. Wayne Kell to meet with the auxiliary and Mrs. Kell as chairman to the following Grady committee in the club: Mrs. William E. Bressard, Mrs. A. C. Whitehead, Mrs. T. L. Jennings and Mrs. Louis Sturke; Capital View Women's Club, Mrs. Neal Jennings; Rebecca chapter of Odd Fellows, Mrs. H. H. Harden; Garden Hills Women's Club, Mrs. G. Z. Maclary.

In response to an appeal for fresh flowers in the hospital made by Mrs. M. M. Neal, the following garden clubs have responded: Azalea, Mrs. Charles N. Walker; St. Charles, Mrs. Reuben Williams; Peony Garden Club, Mrs. John D. Evans; Vateria, Mrs. L. V. Kennerly; Atkins Park, Mrs. F. McWhite; Canary and Flower, Mrs. J. L. McCord; Lullwater, Mrs. Charles Waite. Each one of these have agreed to present the subject of Grady's need for flowers to their individual clubs and others wishing to share in this work may call Mrs. Neal at Dearborn 1834.

There are wards without sponsors and any organization desiring to undertake this activity may do so by consulting Mrs. Mason, ward chairman, at Dearborn 2923. A recent donation to the hospital was 2,000 paper slippers presented by Tech Woman's Club. These slippers can be bought at $8.46 a thousand and are needed at Grady.

A Woman Views Men's Styles For Spring

By YVONNE COLLETTE.
I have told you of the new hats for men, also about the fashions in neckwear. Today I shall give you my interpretation of the new styles in the well-dressed man has offered to him in his choice of shirts and shirts.

No longer shall we of the weaker sex look with sartorial scorn upon the heretofore colorless male of the species. No, a thousand noes, for our lords and masters have taken upon themselves colors in their own apparel. The colors, the hues, blues, greens, helios, slate, and taupe, the patterns, stripes, checks, plaids, dots, and fancy patterns. So you can readily see that while the plain white shirt will have its place, the "man about town" and the "man of affairs" will both have something entirely different.

The collars, too, will be individual. There will be a style for the type which needs a long point. One for the man who should wear the round tab collar. The neck lines will be in various heights. Some low, some medium and some high.

Another happy item in the fashions for men will be the beautiful crepe shirts, in solid colors, with the pastel shades holding first place. Our men will truly be colorful. They have in this glorious spring of 1933 an opportunity to bestir their admiration of their colorful clothes. Be sure that your knife of the heart is in style.

Mrs. Rauch Pleads for New Members In Ranks of Georgia Division U. D. C.

Of Sycamore, State Editor of Georgia Division, U. D. C.
Every member of the Georgia division, U. D. C., can be a participant, even if a minor one, in the earnest quest for new members proposed by Mrs. J. M. Hatch, chairman of membership of the Georgia U. D. C. If, perhaps, one cannot secure an actual addition to one's chapter—surely chapter loyalty is expressed in chapter activities and regular attendance, are powerful agents in expressing love for the ideals for which the members contribute immeasurably by "clapping hands" and reaching out for other hands—so if this is for you a comparatively new role to play when all the more put your whole heart into the game and watch developments. You will marvel at the active forces for a chapter's good that arise when everyone outgrows the passive stage and quick-steps for an increase in chapter membership. Make every effort possible to secure new members, says Mrs. Rauch—and especially do I urge that you direct your energies to secure the young women just emerging from the junior high school, who are interested in themselves in other affairs. Remember, April is the month set apart for this feature of work.

Pelham chapter held its March meeting at the clubrooms Wednesday afternoon, with A. H. Baggs, Deulah Brooks, Dan Cheeves, J. H. Ball, Mattie Kemp and Martha Mills as hostesses. The meeting was presided over by Mrs. W. C. Twitty in the absence of the president. A vote or limiting the term of a chapter president to four years was postponed until a future meeting. A letter from Mrs. Thomas W. Reed expressing her appreciation of the chapter's work for state president was read. Mrs. W. S. Hill, the registrar, reported that the papers of Mrs. A. L. Bowen for membership had been sent in. There being no further business, the meeting was turned over to Mrs. F. C. Gammage, program chairman, and the following program was read: "The Naval Battle of Hampton Roads," Mrs. L. J. Powell; song, "Maryland, My Maryland," Mrs. B. Williams; piano selection, Miss Louise May; and "Sketch of the Life of General James Longstreet," Miss Geneva Jones.

March meeting of Laura Rutherford chapter was held at the home of the president, Mrs. T. W. Reed, on the university campus. The report on the essay contest showed that more interest than usual is being manifested in this work this year on the part of the school children. It was reported that a neat sum was realized from the annual sale of Georgia flags. Membership committee is successfully conducting a canvass for new members and is meeting with success. The sunshine committee reported that the old veterans were doing very well. It was announced that J. Alton Hosch, a member of the faculty of the Lunkin law school, of the University of Georgia, would deliver the memorial address on April 29 and that the annual dinner to the old veterans would be given in the home of Mrs. T. W. Reed just before the Memorial Day exercises. Mrs. M. W. Lowry gave a most interesting sketch on General J. E. B. Stuart as the man and as the cavalryman. Mrs. Lowry's family had close relationship with Stuart's family, which added a touch of interest, both families having lived in Patrick county, Virginia. Mesdames A. B. Broughton and Mrs. Monroe, authorities on flowers, gave good ideas for fall planting. Mrs. Reed announced that several of the neighboring chapters had offered to help grow flowers for decorating purposes during the state convention and that the chapter at Wadkinsville had invited her to come over and talk with the members about the growing of fall flowers. Mrs. R. H. Bickerstaff, registrar of the chapter, was co-hostess with the president, Mrs. Reed.

Miss Jane Dillon, Mr. Johnston To Wed in June

Carrying wide social interest is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Dillon of the engagement of their daughter, Jane, to Richard Boles Johnston, the marriage to take place in early June. The lovely bride-elect possesses dainty blonde coloring, golden hair, and a slender, graceful figure. She has enjoyed decided popularity among her contemporaries since her early school days.

Miss Dillon graduated from North Avenue Presbyterian school, where she was the youngest member of her class and where she made a high scholastic record. She attended Sweet Briar College, Virginia, and later the University of Illinois, where she received her A. B. degree and was a member of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority. She has enjoyed the cultural advantages of extensive travel in Europe and made her formal bow to Atlanta society with the Debutante Club of 1929-30, being presented at a debut reception and dance given by her parents at Overdene, their handsome Piedmont road residence. She has one sister, Miss Virginia Dillon, who is a student at Hollins College, Virginia.

The bride-to-be is a descendant of prominent families, her mother having been the former Miss Agnes Virginia Nelson, a representative of the distinguished Nelson family of Mississippi, who trace their descent from Lord Nelson, of England. Thomas Nelson Paige is numbered among her ancestors. Miss Dillon's maternal grandmother was the former Miss Margaret Flowers, a belle of old Mississippi. On her paternal side, Miss Dillon is related to pioneers and statesmen of Indiana.

Mr. Johnston is a son of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Johnston, of Atlanta, formerly of Columbus, Ohio. He has two brothers, William and Charles Johnston. The future bridegroom graduated from Columbus Academy in Columbus, Ohio, then attended Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pa., where he received his A. B. degree. He took a prominent part in school activities and athletics as a member of the football team, and was a member of the honorary society, "Sword and Crescent," for campus leaders. He is a member of the Chi Psi social fraternity.

Miss Orr Presents Verbal Bouquet.

Miss Eleanor Orr, clever young secretary of Georgia's Democratic Club, displayed the poise of a seasoned politician when it comes to public speaking, as witnessed by several hundred Atlantans who attended the luncheon given last Monday in honor of the city's distinguished visitor, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

It was not an occasion for speech-making, for Mrs. Wilson declines that privilege for herself at all times, so Mrs. Stacy Hill, president of the Fulton Democratic Woman's Committee, who graciously presided, called only for short informal talks.

Representing her organization, Miss Orr, who is as charming as she is clever, chose to exercise

Mrs. Wilson's prerogative, and in lieu of a speech she presented the distinguished honor guest a verbal bouquet. Quoting Miss Orr: "In this bouquet there is a flower of appreciation from the Fulton County Woman's Democratic Club and similar organizations throughout the country for her organizing and largely perfecting democratic clubs for women in America. There are many forget-me-nots, for as long as there are mothers in Georgia, Mrs. Wilson will be eulogized to their children. I think all the rest of the flowers are flowers fragrant with love, for to us Mrs. Wilson represents the highest in constructive citizenship; the noblest in womanhood."

Miss Orr is the attractive young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Orr, of Newnan, and her advent into the realm of politics is of cordial interest to a wide circle of admiring friends. In addition to her poise and historical ability, she brings to the position the freshness of youth, the splendid heritage of southern aristocracy, and the gift of a superior intellect.

Fifth Generation Bears Family Name.

Little Susan Ann McKenzie, adorable baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. McKenzie, who is scarcely two weeks old, is of the fifth generation in her family to bear the name Susan Ann. The cognomen descends through her maternal ancestry, her mother having been before her marriage Miss Sue Tanner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Tanner, of Carrollton. Mrs. Tanner's given name also being Susan Ann. A novel and attractive gift was that sent the baby by a close friend of her lovely young mother, Mrs. Carl Lewis, who is known for the artistic and unusual ideas expressed in everything she undertakes. A miniature bouquet formed of tiny sweetheart rosebuds and a sky-blue delphinium, encircled by a lace paper frill and tied with peach-colored ribbons, sent as a welcome to wee Susan Ann from another admiring friend, has been mounted by Mrs. Lewis on black velvet and framed in antique gold. The novelty will adorn the walls in the nursery of the charming McKenzie home out near the Brookhaven Club and will preserve for the future belle this floral tribute to her winsomeness and popularity.

THE engagement of Miss Dillon and Richard Boles Johnston is announced today, the marriage to be an interesting social event of June. Mrs. Watkins was formerly Miss Mary Frances Clyatt, of Valdosta, and with Mr. Watkins, now resides in Macon. Mrs. Heard is president of the United Garden Clubs of Columbus, and will act as official hostess to delegates attending the Garden Club of Georgia convention to be held in April in Columbus. Miss Parks is the daughter of Mr.

and Mrs. H. G. Parks, and leaves at an early date for Berkeley, Cal., to visit Misses Sarah Vermilye and Julia Vermilye, former residents of Atlanta. Photo of Miss Dillon by Asasno, and Miss Parks' is the work of Davison-Paxon studio.

Intriguing News Comes From Hollywood

Ever intriguing is the news concerning Atlanta's emperor of golf, Bobby Jones, who is out in Hollywood. He is working on a new series of golf shorts for the Warner studios. Not long since technicians labored for an entire day trying to get a suitable imitation of a golf ball passing the microphone. Fly swatters, branches of trees and various other imitations were tried without success to obtain the suitable imitation of a golf ball passing in the microphone. The next day the technicians drove a real golf ball past the "mike" and it registered the right effect.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones, their children, Clara, Bobby Jr. and Mary Ellen Jones, departed some weeks ago for Hollywood and have been ensconced in the Beverly-Wilshire hotel. Mrs. Jones was invited by the Warner studio to play golf in the Bobby Jones production, in which she is featured in a long back swing.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones have been entertained lavishly by the elite of the movie colony, and have been dined and teed by the Los Angeles Junior League. An elaborate party was given recently in their honor by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lloyd at their picturesque home on the outskirts of Hollywood. Mr. Lloyd is one of the most noted directors in the industry, and directed that marvelous film of Noel Coward's "Cavalcade," that charming picture recently shown at the Erlanger. Diana Wynyard and Olive Brooks, who played the leading roles in "Cavalcade," were invited to meet the Atlantans, as were Gary Cooper and other prominent people identified with the moving picture colony.

At an informal party given by Joe Cauthorn at his residence, Mr. and Mrs. Jones were honor guests, and it was here they met Mr. and Mrs. John Barrymore, who add so much charm and culture to any gathering. Among their close friends are Mr. and Mrs. Grantland Rice, and this congenial quartet often golf together on the beautiful links along the Pacific coast. An added interest of the western trip was the motor journey to Tia Juana to witness the races

Atlanta Housekeepers Duplicate Menu.

The economy luncheon served President Roosevelt by the first lady of the land at the White House last week attracted universal attention. It met with popular appeal among Atlanta housekeepers, and Mrs. Andrew Calhoun and Mrs. Vaughn Nixon were the first to duplicate the menu in luncheons served to their families.

The repast is delectable and nourishing, costs seven and a half cents a person, and includes hot stuffed eggs with tomato sauce, mashed potatoes, prune pudding, bread and coffee. The menu was arranged for Mrs. Roosevelt by the home economics department of Cornell University.

Baby Eben Hardie Receives Many Gifts.

The gods that be have certainly smiled on small Eben Hardie, III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eben Hardie Jr., of New Orleans, La. In the first place, he is fortunate in having such attractive young parents as his lovely mother, the former Miss Ruth Miller, a popular belle of Atlanta, and his father, a representative of a prominent family in the Crescent City and a former football star at Tulane. On his arrival this baby was presented with a most exquisite complete layette, the gift of his adoring paternal aunt, Miss Ella Hardie, and selected by Miss Hardie and his mother. This was augmented by the gifts of the baby's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Clara Belle Miller, of Atlanta, who has recently returned from New Orleans, where she visited Mrs. Hardie Sr.

When tiny Eben celebrated the first month's anniversary of his birth, Monday, March 20, he was established in the attractive nursery furnished for him by his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Eben Hardie Sr., in his parents' new apartment on Hurst street. Pink scatter rugs reflect the tones of the crisp organdy curtains at the sunny windows, and the ivory-tinted furniture is displayed to advantage against the color motif of pink carried out in all the appointments. Pink point d'esprit drapes the hood of the dainty bassinet occupied by this adorable infant, and the satin lining is of the same tint, while a broad, blue, satin ribbon is laced through the open-work at the edge of the basket.

Miniature silver military brushes, made exactly like those used by grown-ups, are among little Eben's presents, and are particularly prized for they were a gift to his father when he was a baby and were used for him. A silver cup used by his father will also be used for this baby. Atlanta friends are eagerly anticipating a visit from this couple, and an opportunity to greet the youngest Hardie.

Rosewood Desk Willed To Miss Jane Dillon.

Among the prized possessions that will grace the home to be presided over by Miss Jane Dillon after she becomes the bride of Richard Boles Johnston at a June ceremony will be a beautiful old Rosewood desk, an heirloom in the family of the bride-to-be. This handsome piece of furniture was willed to the future 1933 bride by her maternal grandmother, the late Mrs. George B. Nelson, and was made from a quaint, old-fashioned spinet piano which was a wedding gift to Mrs. Nelson, the former Miss Margaret Flowers, from her father, who was numbered among the largest slave owners in Mississippi.

Following her marriage, which came at the close of the Civil War, Mrs. Nelson placed the piano at Elmwood plantation, where she reigned as the gracious mistress. After the piano was converted into a desk, this matron of old Mississippi used it to write her fascinating stories about the plantation life and the negro servants around her. Because of Miss Dillon's talent for writing, Mrs. Nelson gave this valued possession to this favored granddaughter, who hopes, with the desk as an inspiration, to compile her grandmother's stories for publication in book form.

Garden Tour Has Great Appeal To Atlantans

Of special appeal to garden lovers is the tour of a number of beautiful Atlanta gardens to be conducted during the coming weeks under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary of Eggleston hospital. Gardens famous throughout the state for their choice blossoms and shrubbery will be opened, and since each day brings some new flower or vine into gorgeous blossom, the gardens will be a riot of beauty when April makes its debut on the calendar.

Hundreds of new flowers are adding their color to the horticultural landscape and the woodlands are dotted with peach, plum and unfolding dogwood. Azalea and woodland violets will grace the hillside in a few days and the large estates and the small informal gardens will be clothed in a wealth of beauty to greet the garden-minded.

Mrs. J. J. Goodrum's handsome home on Pace's Ferry road is set in the midst of a beauty spot and the boxwood hedges which flank the flagstone entrance walk is picturesque in detail. Pale-shaded English daisies vie for interest with the purple tones of the violets, and the terraced gardens will flaunt a riot of tulips in the forthcoming weeks. The walled-in garden is more formal in character and a feature of the arrangement is the serpentine brick wall graced with a trailing vine, its pink flowers lending color to the cream-colored masonry. Roses in glorious array will lift their fragrant blossoms in early May, and the formal garden will be ablaze with color.

A charming small pool graces the garden of Mrs. Carl Lewis' home on Clifton road in Druid Hills. Encircled by water, iris, Japanese iris, primroses and maidenhair fern, the crystal water reflects the colorful flowers. A flagstone terrace leads from the rear of the home to the pool, and bordering the terrace are long, narrow beds where bloom an array of tulips, pansies, blue phlox and primroses. The out-of-door living room, encircled by boxwood and cedar posts entwined with climbing roses, boasts a trio of stone benches. An inviting walk leads to the cloistered retreat hidden in the midst of the garden.

Mayfair, the Habersham way estate of Mrs. Harry Atkinson, boasts twin gardens with a wide panel of green lawn graced with quaint fountains. Fashioned in England in bygone days, the fountains, made of lead, were brought to Georgia by Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson and placed in the gardens of their home. Beds of tulips and lilies grace long plots in the informal garden, and a wide sweep of exquisitely landscaped

Uncle Remus Play To Be Presented By Marionettes

Junior League Marionettes, in their Uncle Remus play, will be presented by the Girl Scouts on Saturday morning, April 1, at 9:30 o'clock at the Rialto theater. Admission will be 25 cents for adults and 15 cents for children, and the proceeds will be used to improve the hut at Fernbank, in Druid Hills.

Fernbank, the wooded estate of Colonel Z. D. Harrison, has been made available by him and Miss Emily Harrison as a site for the Girl Scout day camp and nature study classes. There is a cabin, badly in need of repair, which will be used as headquarters. Proceeds of the Marionette performance will be used in reconditioning the cabin. Fernbank fills a long-felt need in the Atlanta Scout program; a beautiful outdoor spot, and the woods have never been cut, wild flowers grow in abundance, and a bird sanctuary adorns the grounds. Mrs. Fredrick Edey, national president of Girl Scouts of America, who is spending this week in Atlanta, will be honor guest at the Marionette show and will speak during the intermission.

Town and Country Shows Atlanta Home.

The current issue of Town and Country devotes five pages to the presentation of the handsome Pace's Ferry residence of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. English. It is pleasing to the community that this leading magazine pays compliment to Atlanta in this manner. Accompanying the photographs is a charming article written by Mary Ralls Dockstader, in which she describes the British neoclassic architecture of the late eighteenth and early nineteenth century, which is represented in the English mansion.

Pictures of the entrance facade feature the Grecian urns set in niches of Pompeian red, and a view of the rear elevation ornamented by old cast iron panels from New Orleans. The dining room, representing China as Chippendale presented it to his fashionable British patrons, shows lacquer red doors, Kwan-yin statues, Chippendale mahogany furniture, a French rug and Waterford glass chandelier. The living room with its walls of soft green, Aubusson rug and deep red and white draperies, beautifully the March issue of Town and Country.

If you wish to have a part in the exhibit send it or bring it to Savannah, care Mrs. George H. Slappey, Parent-Teacher headquarters, DeSoto hotel. It will be interesting to know how some of the charm or importance of your local community in the development of Georgia.

'Children First' Is Theme Chosen For State P.T. A. Convention

By Mrs. R. H. Hankinson, President of the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers.

At this time when the state of Georgia is at sea as to the status of education from the standpoint of finances, (the result of the conclusions reached by the general assembly in the session just closed) the theme that has been chosen for the twentieth annual convention of the Georgia Congress of Parents and Teachers, April 17-19, at Savannah, Ga., "Children First," is particularly apropos. The safety of the state is tied very closely with the education of the state's children. The parents and teachers of the state are jointly responsible for the program of education of the state. It has to offer. The convention program will seek to stimulate thoughtful consideration of this program. The convention theme will be developed through inspirational addresses and through conferences conducted by specialists in the various lines of parent-teacher work. Leaders of national recognition will conduct conferences, and every conference will be planned to make the work of the coming year more effective.

Many of the purely convention features have been eliminated for this time. The convention has been designated as a conference convention, and it is hoped that every member will receive the practical help necessary for the successful carrying on of the Parent-Teacher Association back home.

The meeting of the board of managers on Monday morning, April 17, will handle such matters as are relative to the opening of the convention. The school of instruction for board members will immediately follow. Delegates will register at the DeSoto hotel beginning at 10 a. m.

Love Through the Ages

BY DAN SMITH

Helena in Search of a Prince Charming

SUNDAY, MARCH 26, 1933

Trade Mark Registration Applied for

1 LOVE, the tenderest, yet most enduring of all emotions, was born when the first man looked at the first woman. The men of the cave-age battled among themselves for fair feminine prizes. In Turkish harems, slave-girls beguiled cruel and powerful Sultans with languishing glances and wondrous tales. Even among the fierce Amazons, that love which is said to "make the world go round" flourished down through the centuries.

Today we turn to ancient Athens, the birth-place of culture and the arts. At the left we see Helena, fairest daughter of Temistocles, being placed on the matrimonial auction block by her irate father. Just like many modern girls, Helena has refused to marry the man of her father's choice. The infuriated patrician is keeping his vow to sell her in marriage to the highest bidder. "She says she must love the man she marries," he mutters angrily to himself as the bids mount. "I never heard such nonsense."

2 Helena's Quest for Love

JUST as Temistocles was about to hand his daughter over to the highest bidder, a wealthy Senator, Horace Malinius, the lovely Helena escaped from the market-place and hid in the home of a friend. Only now, on a day of carnival and rejoicing, has she emerged. A garland on her beautiful head, she wanders to the Temple of Athens, is jostled by the merry-makers and eyed by the masqueraders. Standing before an altar to the Goddess Helena looks about her.

"Where, oh where is he?" she asks herself. For like innumerable twentieth century misses she believes that for her, too, there is but one man in the world, some Prince Charming, brilliant and generous, gentle but courageous, who has not yet appeared in her life.

And just like her sisters of today her problem is to find that one man in the world.

"I'll look for him to the end of my life, if necessary," she murmurs while the playboys and playgirls of the Grecian city cut capers, play pranks on one another, embrace and dance.

On the way to the temple Helena was seized by men dressed as animals and satyrs but she shook them off and went her way.

For her, love is no light thing but something serious and very important. Vital enough for her to quarrel with her father and family, leave her home over the issue of a "marriage of convenience."

And as she looks around on the wild and exciting scene, her head is full of sweet hopes. But a raucous voice arouses her from her reverie. A militiaman is pointing his club at her—

3 A Prince to the Rescue

THEY have captured Helena. All seems to be lost. Her arrest means that she will be returned to her father's home and then turned over to the aged and dissolute Senator who bought her on the auction block in the market-place.

She faints, but before her form crumples to the ground a young and handsome prince dashes to her side. Holding her up with one strong arm he orders the militiamen away. "I am the son of your ruler, the tyrant!" he exclaims. "And I claim this fair lady for my own."

As Helena recovers, she hears these brave words. Perhaps this young prince is the one she has been seeking. Hand-in-hand, she and her rescuer leave the crowded thoroughfares of the city.

4 Helena's Disillusionment

BUT just before passing out into the hills near Athens, the prince stopped and purchased a jug of nectar and a drinking cup. He offers the cup to her but the young girl refuses with a slight shudder of dismay.

The prince shrugs his shoulders and tilts the jug to his lips. Helena watches him. Is this the lover she has dreamed about all her life? A wine-bibber, a nectar-guzzler? Certainly, he seems more interested in the contents of the jug than he is in her. Again and again he swigs from the jug.

Now his eyes are glazed, his speech uncertain. Helena surveys him with disgust. Little Eros appears and takes her by the hand, as the stupefied prince sinks down by the roadside, his empty jug behind him.

"Come with me, Helena," says the little God of Love. "I'll find your true mate for you." And Helena goes with him. There will be no tavern-loving, intemperate husband for her. Like many girls of the present age she cannot respect a man who does not respect himself.

INSTALLMENT II.—DRAMATIC TRIUMPHS

FOLLOWING her triumph in the Gaiety Theatre, "The Silver Box," Charles Frohman selected "Lady Frederick," a Somerset Maugham comedy, then running in London, as Ethel's next production. In June she sailed for England for her annual visit, combining her social obligations with the business of reviewing the play and a trip to Paris to see Lionel, who was still enjoying his pursuit of art in that city. She returned to this country to star in the Maugham opus, "Lady Frederick," a woman of 40, whose many romances had made her brittle and sceptical. Miss Barrymore, who was 28 at the time, gave such a deft performance in the role of this middle-aged butterfly, that the play, which had met with little success in its original London production, became a hit on Broadway. She was still portraying "Lady Frederick" to packed houses when Lionel came home to begin a vaudeville tour, much against his sister's wishes, and John astounded New York with a musical comedy triumph in "A Stubborn Cinderella."

John was the gayest, handsomest, most popular musical hero on Broadway. Ethel glowed with his success. Her own engagement prohibited her from seeing him in the new production and John, the true Barrymore, gave a performance on an off-matinee day with his sister as the only person in the audience. "The Fortune Hunter," a comedy drama earned him additional laurels that same year. Ethel was touring with "Lady Frederick," but the rest of the family were in New York.

John gave a professional matinee, attended by the famous stars then in town. But it remained a family party, with Uncle John Drew, his daughter, Louise Drew, and Lionel Barrymore and his wife viewing the performance from a box. Uncle John asked his nephew to turn about and show the folks how he had grown. John did as he was requested. When his audience called upon him for a curtain speech he looked up at his uncle and said: "Oh, Uncle John, isn't it nice to be on Broadway?" "The Fortune Hunter" ran for two years, during which time both John and Ethel married.

Society and the theater thrilled to Ethel Barrymore's romantic marriage to Russell Griswold Colt, son of Samuel Pomeroy Colt, president of the United States Rubber Company. They were married during the Boston engagement of "Lady Frederick." As Mrs. Russell Colt, Ethel's position in high society was doubly strong and demanding. As Ethel Barrymore, she had to go on with her tour until the last city on her itinerary had been played. There was no time for a honeymoon. With her new husband and her make-up box, she continued trouping for a year.

At the conclusion of her "Lady Frederick" tour Ethel and her husband returned to New York to their East 34th street home. Newspapers announced that Miss Barrymore's next Broadway appearance would be delayed until after the new year. Pinner's "Mid-Channel," a tragedy of middle-class English life would serve as her next vehicle by arrangement between the author and Charles Frohman.

During the time between her return and the opening of her new play, she had another important role for which to prepare. On November 28, 1909, she made her debut as a mother, with the birth of Samuel Pomeroy Colt, named after his paternal grandfather. The young man's Uncle Lionel was away on a vaudeville tour, but his Uncle John was on hand to give him the official Barrymore welcome. Reporters covering the event, which occurred at 11 p. m., on a Sunday night, sought out the latter for comment. John, a bit flustered by the newness of his first experience as uncle, managed to collect his wits sufficiently to assure all and sundry that the baby showed unusual consideration for a Barrymore by arriving on Sunday, a non-theater night.

The wifehood-motherhood-career boy never threatened Ethel Barrymore's tranquility. Her grandmother and mother had set too excellent an example for her to be embroiled in any such controversy. She opened in "Mid-Channel" at the Empire theater in January, 1910, quite in accord with the original plans for the play. She scored a tremendous personal hit, although the play was derided as morbid and unappealing. Her most avid admirers agreed that her art, like her figure, had rounded out—and that both were improved by it. She played in "Mid-Channel" until August and then left for Europe with her husband on a belated honeymoon trip.

Ethel and her husband sailed, leaving John to keep the Barrymore banner aloft on Broadway. He was still playing to S. R. O. houses in "The Fortune Hunter." Like his father before him, he was a matinee idol without peer. Ladies with hearts a-flutter crowded the theater at every performance. Ethel, the typical American girl and the most engaged girl in America, might marry, have babies and go sailing off on honeymoons. Lionel might bury himself in art and music and then desert the legitimate theater for vaudeville. Here was one Barrymore who remained true to the million feminine hearts that skipped beats over him.

In order that no shadow of domesticity might mar his romantic appeal, he was insured against marriage to the tune of $50,000! And, like a one-hundred-per cent Barrymore, John followed up this unusual Lloyd policy with the announcement of his engagement and his immediate marriage to Katherine Harfris, a society debutante. His let-down of his public in getting married was met by no let-up in its attendance at the theater. The stir created by the policy and his new estate heightened his romantic drawing power.

Lionel Barrymore's vaudeville tour was looked upon with disfavor by his sister Ethel. Once, when questioned in an interview, she answered: "If Lionel prefers age during the past several years had in no way interfered with her dramatic art; but it had caused a lot of heartaches among her admirers. In 1914, three years after Lionel love, only to find himself beaten by insurmountable tragedy—hardly the play or role for a romantic, light comedian. John caught Broadway completely off-guard, smashing through with a performance that undammed the tear ducts and brought the reviewers to their knees. "Justice" gave the theater world the John rived and that the vehicle which was to bring him back was "Peter Ibbetson," with himself (John) in the little role and Lionel as Peter's uncle.

"Peter Ibbetson" gave old-timers on Broadway a choice morsel to chew on. Lionel's return was an event in itself—but here was the perfect opportunity to comment of fierce courage and blatant appetites. Its story was the weakling's triumph of wit and brain over his enemy's brawn and strength John would play the poet. Lionel would play the soldier.

The result was "The Jest" one of the most brilliant and colorful productions of all time. As Gianetto, the poet, John was the essence of spiritual beauty. He grew from a shrinking coward to a flaming avenger as he pursued his mad plan for revenge, dragging his enemy Neri into a maelstrom of demoniacal tragedy. Neri, whose creed was "I love women; I drink wine; I kill men," was brilliantly acted by Lionel, with a bravura that won the character, the complete sympathy of the audience, despite its treacherous villainies. "The Jest" remains the greatest of the joint Barrymore stage productions.

Broadway's claim to the brothers in no way interfered with their picture work. Lionel did "The Copperhead" for the screen and John made "The Test of Honor," his first serious movie role and his first attempt at make-up, an art that was to bring him still greater prestige in the years that followed.

Nineteen hundred and nineteen, the year that brought "The Jest" to Broadway, also offered Ethel Barrymore in "Declassee," her greatest role and her finest play. The close of the second act found her first night audience on its feet, cheering. It was the supreme triumph of her long career. Zoe Akins, new to the theater at the time, wrote the play which concerned a titled English woman who loses caste through an indiscretion. The story follows her down the ladder until her tragic death. "Declassee" was a splendid play; the central character was perfectly suited to Miss Barrymore's talents and she acted it at the zenith of her powers and in the fullness of her queenly beauty. It was Barrymore's Broadway in the good year 1919.

The following season, while Ethel toured with "Declassee" and Lionel starred in "The Letter of the Law," John again hit the season's high note on the stage with "Richard III" and the screen with "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." He was the first of the three to play a Shakespearean role. As Richard, the hideously deformed, though kingly murderer, he found his real genius for the theater. He made the character a moral and physical monstrosity, matching his winged imagination with his technical perfection. Heyward Brown called his performance "the most inspired this generation has seen." On all sides he was hailed as the successor to Richard Mansfield, whose "Richard III" had been accepted as the final portrait.

John's screen portrayal of Jekyll and Hyde furthered the comparison between the two, as was an outstanding Mansfield role, as was "Beau Brummell," which would soon serve Barrymore as another picture hit. John's strenuous work in the theater and picture studios took their toll. "Richard III" closed after a three-weeks' run and the star was hurried to a health farm for a prolonged rest cure. In August, he married Blanche May, Celrics Thomas, known in the world of letters as Michael Strange.

"Claire Du Lune," an imaginative and exquisite fantasy written by Michael Strange, brought John and Ethel as co-stars to the Empire in April, 1921. Following upon its brief run the John Barrymores sailed for Paris. Lionel was left to uphold the family traditions in "The Claw," another sensational hit upon which was based his recent screen play "Washington Masquerade." "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," produced in 1923, can be added to Lionel's success list.

John returned to Broadway in November, 1922, to play "Hamlet." Ten years have passed since then, but the glory of his performance in this greatest and most difficult of Shakespearean roles remains undimmed. His one hundred and first performance on February 9, 1923, broke the record set by Booth in the season of 1864-5.

When John took "Hamlet" to London, English theater savants were faintly amused at his impertinence in invading Shakespeare's homeland with the Bard's favorite tragedy. Advance reports of the production fell on polite and skeptical ears. Not only was John bringing "Hamlet" to England—he had "improved" on the play by rewriting a portion of the text to suit his staging of it. The success of Barrymore's "Hamlet" in England is history. However, George Bernard Shaw saw the production and then wrote him to the effect that although John did the part as well as any man ever had, when it came to writing plays, Shakespeare could write Barrymore's head off. This letter is one of John's favorite trophies and he has included it in his book, "Confessions of an Actor."

Perhaps John himself realized that he had done his master stroke in the theater in "Hamlet." Perhaps he believed he had earned the leisure promised by life in California. Whatever the reason, he turned his back upon the stage and began in earnest the picture career upon which he has since continued.

John as the Baron and Lionel as Kringlein, are presented in a still from "Grand Hotel." At the center, John Barrymore and his wife, Dolores Costello, are admiring their son, little John Blyth Barrymore.

For his performance of the role Stephen Ashe in "A Free Soul," in which he is shown in the lower picture with Norma Shearer, Lionel Barrymore won the award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Science.

Early the following year after a brief appearance with her Uncle John at the Empire in "The Scrap of Paper," she decided to investigate this new hobby of Lionel's. She made her first appearance under Kleig lights in "The Nightingale," a screen play especially written for her by Augustus Thomas, one of Broadway's noted playwrights.

She starred in several other movies causing frantic discussion as to whether she, too, had deserted the stage forever. Ethel wisely devoted that year to making pictures, to enjoying life at home with her three children and her husband, and of great importance to losing 75 pounds, thereby reducing her figure to its former glory. Her increasing pound-discovered the movies, the movies discovered John. He became a comedy star in "An American Citizen," "The Man From Mexico," "Are You a Mason?" and "The Dictator." Professionally, John was leading a Jekyll-Hyde existence. On the screen he was the most popular of comedians. In the theater he was preparing for the role that was to make him one of Broadway's greatest dramatic stars. New York had some inkling of John's latent powers when he starred in "Kick In," his first dramatic hit. It was completely unprepared for the sensation he created in "Justice."

"Justice" opened on April 2, 1916. A grim, tragic story of a weakling who makes one retaliating stab at life in the name of

Barrymore of "Peter Ibbetson," "Redemption," "The Jest," "Richard III" and "Hamlet."

Critics waxed lyric over John Barrymore in "Justice." One of them compared him to Rachmaninoff's music, writing: "John Barrymore's acting symbolizes the lofty tragedy of human life—a beginning in faint sounds that are very ghosts of silence . . . a swirl to the clamor of noisy young confidence . . . a crash into the discord of maturity . . . a trembling into the uncertainties of age . . . a fadeout into chorched nothings."

But John had more in store for the reviewers than even they thought possible. Upon completing his tour in "Justice" he convinced Lionel that the time for his return to Broadway had arrived.

SHANHAIKWAN, ORIENTAL GATEWAY

SHANHAIKWAN, the scene of clashes between Japanese and Chinese troops, is one of the "key cities of the far east," according to a bulletin from Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"Situated on a narrow coastal plain where the only water-level trade route between China and Manchuria pierces the Great Wall of China, Shanhaikwan has for centuries been a place of strategic importance far out of proportion to its 80,000 population and a few native industries," continues the bulletin.

"At Shanhaikwan the Great Wall of China drops down from the mountainous borderland between China proper and Manchuria, and after a short run across the coastal plain tumbles into the sea, or rather the Gulf of Liaotung. Here is the best preserved section of the Great Wall, and its celebrated eastern gate, called 'First Heaven Number 1 Gate,' or 'The First Gate of the World.'"

"Once Shanhaikwan and its part of the Great Wall formed part of the first line of Chinese defence against the natives of Manchuria, the Manchus. For more than 30 years the Manchus were kept at bay in this region. Finally, on May 26, 1944, aided by a furious sand storm, the forces of the Manchurian leader Wu San Kuai managed to overcome a vastly superior Chinese army and scaled the Great Wall, pouring into China to become masters of that country until the republic was established in 1912. Shanhaikwan was occupied by allied troops during the Boxer Rebellion in 1900. Here the allied forces landed.

"The city of Shanhaikwan, whose name means 'Between Mountain and Sea' (it lies three miles from the mountains and an equal distance from the sea), is roughly divided into three parts—the old walled city, surrounded by three miles of fortifications 40 feet high; a walled quarter east of the city proper and outside the Great Wall; and a third section outside the west gate of the city proper."

"Shanhaikwan owes most of its present importance to the railroad line between Tientsin and Mukden which cuts through the Great Wall at this point. This is the only rail link between China proper and Manchuria, and, with the Chinese Eastern and Trans-Siberian railways, it forms part of a continuous transcontinental line to Europe in normal times.

"The Tientsin-Mukden line was built more than a third of a century ago. Popular sentiment in China at that time would not have permitted a breach in the Great Wall for the line and it would have ended at Shanhaikwan had not a special opening in the Wall been at hand. The local story to account for the breach is that a Chinese princess, seeking the body of her husband who had been killed in the defense of the Wall and buried in it, tore down a part of the great structure. At any rate, through the existing gap the railroad was run."

"Few foreigners live in Shanhaikwan, but there are a number of fair hotels and Chinese inns, in addition to the railroad yards and places for the outfitting of caravans to the interior."

Here's Murder Set to Music! Who Slew Julie de La Salle in Sight of a Theater Audience, and How?

By William Henry Wisner

"IN THIRTY years on the force," declared Deputy Commissioner MacDonald, "I never heard of, let alone saw, a case with so many giddy bypaths. Don't you stage people do anything but hate each other, Mike?"

His old friend, Michael Kennering, producer of the "Spotlights of 1932," sighed wearily. "Raise you five, Don; I've been thirty-five years in this business and never saw a show have such chronic hard luck before opening night—and now, with Julie shot dead right on the stage, it's just too much."

At 8:50 five minutes late, thanks to a balky curtain, that "Four Hundred" of the theater, New York's first-night regulars, beheld and gave ear to the opening chorus of the current "Spotlights." At 9:15 all of that audience, except those whom the police ordered to remain, was disappointedly, sadly, amazedly, or in silent horror trudging up the aisles and out of the Pieter Minuit, Manhattan's newest, smartest theater.

Five minutes before, Julie de La Salle and Abelard Alain had pirouetted from the wings in their first entrance. To a crashing, reverberating orchestra crescendo the pair had reached the climax of their gyrations, when Julie, with a grimace of agony, dropped lifeless to the stage, a bullet through her heart.

And now Deputy Commissioner MacDonald, in charge at the scene of the tragedy, after deploying his staff upon other phases of the investigation, assigned to himself the questioning of the revue's producer.

"Well, Mike," said the police official, "I may be fishing the Atlantic with a bent pin but suppose you tell me all about the troubles with your show. Start at the beginning."

Grateful for an audience at the recital of his woes, Kennering opened with this general lament:

"Don some shows try out in New Haven, some in Atlantic City. This one played both, and Wilkesbarre and Paterson. Some horse operas have a lot of backers. This one has one—and his wife. Sometimes I thought the troupe must be spending all its time whistling at table, following black cats, walking under ladders, casting hats on beds, cracking mirrors, and speaking last last lines."

This (continued Mike Kennering) isn't the best year show business ever had and when, Martin Saunders—you know, Saunders' Remedies—offered to buy a large slice of "Spotlights" I could have fallen on his neck, until I remembered that Madalynn Manton, his wife, was "glorified" by Flo back in 1916. But I sounded him out, and it appeared she didn't want a single little thing, only for hubby to get in the business. Don, I should have known better!

As usual, Jerry Turney was to write the book and lyrics, and then came the first hitch. I've had Adolph Holner do the music for every "Spotlights" I ever put on, and Julie de La Salle has been under contract to me since last season.

First thing, Marty Saunders wanted to let Julie out. Thought the public regards her as a pretty poor joke, what with her attempt to outmarry Nat Goodwin, and especially since that nasty publicity scrap with Greg Vassilovitch last year when she divorced him.

I was in Europe or I'd have done something about it. You remember her dig that Greg is really George Vance of Pocahontas, Idaho, and his comeback that Julie was born Wilhelmina Katzezimmer in Hackensack, New Jersey. Both of which items were no news and less good to anybody.

I told Marty, sure we could let Julie go, and have a nice wrangle with Equity and spend a lot of money for nothing. That stopped him. In case you don't know Marty, it's been one of the world's wonders that Madalynn got him to sink any of the long green in this business, when by comparison bulling the stock market, even today, is like having the foghorn concession on the Thames.

So Marty abandoned topic A and proceeded to B. Marty thought, meaning Madalynn, that Holner's music was demode. That's the word he used, and you needn't tell me where he got it. His candidate for the job (and you could have knocked me down with nothing in particular when he named him) was Burton Weatherly as competent a composer as is. But he's Greg's predecessor, Julie's third husband; and handling Julie is hard enough without the added handicap of that mean egg. She divorced him in Chicago, charging cruelty, and I mean cruelty with a capital left to the chin. I happen to know that the grounds were better than well founded. After the divorce he threatened times innumerable to kill her if she ever married again, and she never laid eyes on him since their separation until the first call for this show.

Marty said that Julie didn't have to come much in contact with Weatherly, and why not put it up to her, and if she were insubordinate—and so on. (His candidate for Julie's place, in case, was Beth MacBeth, Madalynn's crony, who's been at liberty since "The Black Crook.")

The upshot was I did ask Julie, and she was surprisingly docile; wouldn't let

A Macabre Problem to Test the Faculties of the Amateur Detective! See if You Can Solve It

personalities interfere with business. But Weatherly has a nasty disposition, and it was just plain misery keeping the temperamental Julie agreeable in the face of his sarcastic sallies. Well, for a while everything went swimmingly—like swimming in a sea of chicken okra, if you don't go for the stuff—and then we all went to Atlantic City.

We tried it on the dog on the balmy night Absecon island ever saw, but before the final curtain frost lay an inch deep all over the house, and the night was not one-tenth as balmy as your old pal, Mike Kennering.

We got rid of Julie's dancing partner and took on young Abelard Alain, whose folks out in Erie, Pennsylvania, in case you want to know, still speak of him as Steve Allen, and Julie fell in love with him—half, I suppose, because she did, and half, if you ask me, to get even with Weatherly for some of his cute remarks.

Then, Don, we fought the Retreat Through the Jerseys: first to Wilkesbarre, then Paterson, and still something was sour. Every time we changed a line or a piece of business, that Marty and his box-office-struck wife insisted on a tryout. It began to look as if this year's "Spotlights" would start as a road show.

Just two weeks ago I took the situation in hand and called in the greatest doctor show business ever knew—Gregoire Vassilovitch. Julie laughed when I told her; said that made it quite a family affair. Weatherly was sore as a boil, but got some joy out of the prospect of Greg enduring the sight of Julie going ga-ga over the Alain kid.

Matter of fact, Greg and Julie split up over money matters. He is close, cautious, and canny, while she, poor girl, never knew whether she was worth a dime or a million. Greg made her take out the first life insurance she ever had, as a means of saving money, and I will say she was better off financially when they were together than at any other time before or since.

Greg certainly put life into the show, and when we opened in New Haven last week I knew I had at least something I needn't be ashamed of.

I heard of but one argument between Julie and Greg, and that was up at New Haven, in her dressing room. Young Alain was there, and the trouble was the same old thing: Julie's shiftlessness in money matters. I understand Julie said that when she and Abelard were married after the New York run, he would handle all her finances.

But this rift didn't seem to affect the cordial relations among the three. Greg worked harder over their numbers than he did over any others. Why, even tonight, just before the curtain, he told Alain to change his final posture in the first dance, to swing right, and avoid cutting across and blocking Julie's solo part; and just after the curtain went up Greg went out front to see how the changed business looked.

Well, Don, that brings us down to now. I hate to tell you this, but I know my duty as a man and a citizen.

That first dance of Julie's, the one in which she was killed, is staged in a house as dark as we can make it. The only lights in the theater are the dim exit bulbs, the music stand lights in the orchestra pit, the director's baton light, and on the stage the spotlight that follows Julie in the dance and the electric flashes in the back drop that give the effect of thousands of firecrackers exploding. The dance was originally called "Night of July Fourth," but Madalynn had to have that changed to "Nuit du Quatrieme Juillet."

Here is the rest of it: I was passing Julie's dressing room when I heard her voice and Weatherly's. I didn't catch her remark, but I heard him say:

"All right, you little fool. Remember what I said I'd do, time and time again. Remember that when you're dancing; when you have your back turned to me. Tonight I've got it fixed for you: the kettledrums are loud enough to drown the roar of a cannon, and they'll be louder tonight. Remember what I said when you hear them start to roll!"

That's all, Don. The drums were rumbling when the poor girl was killed.

The diagram at the top of the page shows the position and occupation of each person to any extent involved in or held as a witness to the murder at the time Julie de La Salle was killed. As soon as she fell Weatherly and Vassilovitch vaulted to the piano, then the stage, and carried her body backstage as the curtain was lowered. Alain, apparently too stunned to move, remained on his knee as the velvet drop descended. The gun, equipped with a silencer, which fired the shot, was not found until after the crime was solved.

Now, who was the murderer? Read the story and study the diagram carefully. The solution will be found below.

Next week: "The Forgyves Case"

THE SOLUTION

Regardless of motive, Alain, Kennering, Weatherly, and the occupants of the seats pictured might have shot Julie de La Salle, but when possible motives are considered we must eliminate all but Weatherly, Mr. and Mrs. Saunders, Beth MacBeth and Gregoire Vassilovitch. Motive in the cases of all of these, except the director of the orchestra and the "play doctor," is too feeble and tenuous to be considered seriously.

Weatherly's two hands were visible to many.

Vassilovitch took a seat "out front" to observe the change he had ordered in Alain's posture, yet at the very time when he should have been looking at the stage, what does he say he was doing?

His statement is that he was looking in the program to see who designed Julie's costume. Ignoring the triviality of this occupation and the fact that in his capacity he might have known the name of the costumer, such items are printed in small type in theater programs, and in a house "as dark as it can be made" even larger type would be too obscured to read.

Vassilovitch undoubtedly fears Alain's taking over of Julie's finances, and probably because he is still the beneficiary—thanks to Julie's carelessness in financial matters—of the insurance he caused her to buy.

Armed with a gun equipped with a silencer, he shoots the girl from his seat, his program covering the gleam of the weapon, the orchestral din masking any other sound. As a matter of fact, he could have taken a number of shots until one hit its mark.

These Checked With Those of the Dead Hand and Identified the Killer as William Chowick.

A VITAL feature of the work of the U. S. Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice is cooperation with the police departments of foreign cities. For the chief concern of police in all nations often is the international crook, who is one of the shrewdest and most dangerous of criminals. He operates on such a scale and is so elusive in his movements that it is difficult to trap him.

The following article tells in detail how the United States works with Scotland Yard in London, the French Surete and other European police systems in tracking down and apprehending fugitives from justice.

The author of this series of articles was permitted by the Government to explore the whole machinery of the Bureau of Investigation—including secret documents from its famous private files. He sets forth for the first time the real story of how Department of Justice agents identified a bandit by fingerprints left on the ceiling of a bank and other cases involving international criminals.

THE international crook—suave, intelligent, daring—is without a doubt the gravest problem confronting the national police of the countries of the world.

For years he moved from one country to another, leaving in his trail a record of swindling, bank robberies, confidence games—and sometimes murder. But his cleverness matched his viciousness, for frequently he left behind no clue as to his identity or destination.

The first gigantic blow to this type of crook was struck in 1924 by the International Association of Chiefs of Police. This organization prevailed upon our Government to establish an Identification Division which would participate in the international exchange of fingerprints and other criminal data.

This division became one of the most important features of the U. S. Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice. Through it, the Bureau was able to spread out its lines beyond the boundaries of the United States, touching remote foreign countries.

Today thirty-three foreign nations maintain a system of cross-checking with the Bureau of Investigation, with the result that a definite curb has been placed upon the operations of international confidence men, swindlers and other gangsters. Out of this system have come many dramatic and brilliant cases of sleuthing, some of which I shall describe presently.

The international identification methods employed by the U. S. Bureau are identical with those used within the forty-eight States. In the States, for instance, there is no crime that does not come within the purview of the Department of Justice, even though it may not involve a Federal offense.

When young Virgil Kirkland, product of the industrial town of Gary, Indiana, was arrested for the murder of his sweetheart, Had young Kirkland attempted to escape—or if he ever does while serving his term—Washington would be on his trail.

The same applies to Warren J. Lincoln, a leading citizen of Aurora, Ill., who shot and killed his wife and her brother, burned their bodies and embedded their skulls in a concrete slab under the rear porch of his home. Department of Justice sleuths played a part in searching for him. He was found by police, convicted of murder and sent to prison for life.

A GAIN, when Hazel Bradshaw, 19-year-old telephone operator of San Diego, Cal., was found stabbed to death, the Government was prepared to step in. It is not to be assumed that the cases of Kirkland, Lincoln or Miss Bradshaw were of direct concern to the Government or that Uncle Sam played any important part in attempting to solve them.

The significant thing about such cases is that, once a person is fingerprinted in connection with them, that individual is marked for life. The fingerprints are sent to the Bureau of Investigation in Washington. There they are placed on file in the Identification Division—which is the "clearing house" for the police of the nation.

But the Bureau of Investigation sleuths did play a direct part in solving the murder of Miss Henrietta Schmerler on the Apache Indian Reservation.

Miss Schmerler, beautiful and brilliant Columbia University (New York) student of anthropology, went to the Apache Reservation to study Indian habits. She decided to get her information by "being an Indian." She attended ceremonials, dances, and so forth and then one day an Indian youth followed and killed her.

After weeks of intensive investigation, Bureau of Investigation special agents tracked down the killer—Golney Seymour, Apache brave—who was convicted and sentenced to "life."

It is the international phase of the Bureau's work that provides an even more enthralling picture of its efficiency. Heads of foreign police departments regularly send to the Bureau of Investigation fingerprints of American citizens who have been involved in criminal activities abroad.

THE Bureau, on the other hand, sends to police departments abroad fingerprints and other identification records of foreign criminals in our land. Thus, the various police departments of this country (through the Bureau) are in ready touch with such organizations as Scotland Yard in London, the Surete in Paris and the Polizei Praesidium of Berlin.

An absorbing example of international police cooperation is to be found in the case of Charles J. Drossner, notorious forger. The Bureau of Investigation had received his fingerprints from the State Penitentiary at Waupun, Wisconsin.

Copies of the prints were forwarded to the Commissioner of Police at Scotland Yard. The "Yard" reported back immediately by cable that Drossner was really Jose de Braganca, who served seven months in a Rome, Italy, prison for swindling and was wanted by the French Surete for forgery of documents. The Vienna police, who also received "Drossner's" fingerprints, notified the Bureau that they wanted the prisoner.

WHEN Drossner gets out of the Wisconsin prison he will be extradited—and Scotland Yard, the Surete and the police of Vienna will be waiting for him!

A few months ago the Los Angeles Police Department arrested Charles Lawrence Conway. Fingerprints were sent to the Bureau of Investigation. It was discovered on the records in Washington

at he was guilty illegal entry.
otland Yard was ified. It later in-med the Bureau that Conway had a long son record behind him and was wanted in gland. He was consequently deported.
Another case: On August 16, 1930, a taxi-driver, Ernest Midwinter, was found dead nside a road in Alberta, Canada. There s no doubt that he had been murdered.
A blackjack found at the scene of the ne was identified by another taxi driver, o said he had given it to Albert E. Allen a few rs before. The Alberta Provincial Police, with s clue, were able to learn that Allen and three anions had headed in the direction of Bills, Montana, after robbing a re in the Province of Saskatchan and stealing an automobile.
The Alberta police notified
U. S. Bureau of Investigation.
cial agents were dispatched re and learned that four ngers had tried to sell a car in automobile agent. The pro-rator was able to identify the to of Allen.

OM Billings the special agents traced Allen and his comions to Chicago, to New eans and to Denver and then Seattle. There they got on en's trail after learning his er lived somewhere near Car-tion, Washington.

By exercising considerable in-uity, it was ascertained that en was living in a log cabin in wilderness three miles from nation. There he was trapped arrested. He confessed to murder and not only identihis companions but enabled nts and police to trap them.
en was given life imprisonit by the Canadian courts, two ers were hanged and a fourth acquitted.

Perhaps one of the most curious examples of Bureau of Investigation's sleuthing efficiency ne fantastic case of William Chowick, desper-and daring bank robber.
The bank robber—particularly the one who s bombs, instead of bullets, as a threat—is of the most dangerous and desperate of ninals. He endangers the lives, not merely of bank officers, but of innocent customers as
l. That is what Chowick did.
Chowick, however, was not known until the of his biggest job as a bank robber, although did have a criminal record. His fingerprints re in the possession of the U. S. Bureau of estigation for he had been arrested once in wood City, Pennsylvania, for anarchistic utunces and had served time in several Wis-sin jails. Otherwise, he did not appear to a particularly vicious type.

IMPENDING HORROR

Louis Biedermann's Dramatic Drawing
Shows the Scene in the Farmers' National Bank, Pittsburgh, Just Before a Bandit Carried Out His Threat to Blow Up the Bank. Arrow Points to the Bag Containing the Explosives. As a Guard Approached the Bandit, the Latter Dropped the Bag, Kicked It—Then Terrible Catastrophe. All Customers Were Injured But Only the Bandit and Guard Were Killed.

Then one warm August afternoon in 1926 a stranger, carrying a small black bag, walked up to the paying teller of the Farmers' National Bank in Pittsburgh. He presented a carefully penciled, if somewhat ungrammatical, note.
The teller picked it up and was horrified to read:

"Sir, you are held up for two thousand dollar with 50 stock of dynamite, the dynamite is in the grip the one I hold in my hand. It will discharge when the handle is out of my hand. If you or anyone else fires the gun at me, there will be no cage left, we all be blowing up to pieces.

"IF YOU willing to come with two thousand be quiet and keep off from the alarms, the help won't do you no good, if they come they come for their death. If not make all the noise you like. I help you with the noise that all Pittsburgh will hear. If you wish to see the death machine ask for, otherwise absolute silence. Death or two thousand—either you like."

The teller looked about him quickly. There were about forty customers and employes in the bank and death or injury faced all of them. The teller did not know what to do. He glanced over toward the special officer stationed at the entrance. The special officer caught his eye and sized up the situation.

But as the special officer stepped forward the stranger whirled about. He pressed the handle of the bag, dropped it, and kicked it.

There was an explosion that shook the city for blocks around and blew the windows out of nearby buildings.
The bank itself was almost demolished, having been damaged to the extent of $150,000. The bronze cages of the bank were twisted out of shape. Marble counters were splintered to bits.

SCORES of passersby on the street were injured by flying glass, not to mention most of the customers and employes. The special officer of the bank and the bandit himself were the only ones killed. The paying teller miraculously escaped death or serious injury.

The would-be robber, of course, was blown to atoms and no portion of his body could at first be found by which he might be recognized. Yet

ENDLESSLY COUNTING

This Unusual Photographic Study Suggests How a Bank Cashier Looks to a Customer Outside His Cage. With Fortunes in Bills Constantly Before Him, He Knows Not at What Moment His Life Will Be Threatened.

it was important that he be identified. The Pittsburgh police made a thorough search of the debris in what seemed a hopeless task. They did not know that the solution literally hovered over their heads.

All possible clues were run down by local authorities. An open-faced German silver watch, found in the debris, was traced to the manufacturer but failed to establish the stranger's identifity. A telephone number written on a card found in the clothing of the bandit proved of no help, while a belt buckle bearing the initial "L" was equally unproductive.

A BOOK which the man carried, containing the names and addresses of prominent persons in the city, proved valueless. The gold fillings in some of his teeth—ordinarily a good source of identification—were worthless as clues.

Then the police discovered a strange thing. It was a human hand stuck on the high ceiling of the bank. It seemed that when the bandit was blown to bits by his own handiwork one hand flew up to the ceiling and virtually embedded itself there.

Fingerprints of the hand were taken and rushed to the Bureau of Investigation in Washington. The Bureau began a search of its files to see if the fingerprints of the one hand could be identified.

Such a search might seem a job of great magnitude when it is realized that there are on file in Washington 3,400,000 complete sets of fingerprint impressions. Also it is difficult to identify prints when the impressions of only one hand are available.

BUT the Bureau has highly trained men who are able to identify fingerprints within five minutes. It took them little more than that length of time to ascertain that the man who held up —and blew up—the Farmers' National Bank in Pittsburgh was none other than the dangerous William Chowick.

Word was sent to police of the country and Chowick's name was crossed off the list of "fugitives wanted."

Thus ended one of the strangest cases of identification in the history of the Bureau. It is regarded as highly significant by Department of Justice officials because it is added proof of the contention that finger-print identification is the most potent factor in crime detection.

But there are other scientific phases of the Bureau's work which, as we shall see in future chapters, have played an equally important role in the Government's relentless war against crime.

NEXT WEEK—Further thrilling tales about the Bureau of Investigation's methods of tracking down fugitives from justice—including the Alaskan murder mystery, the murder on a military reservation, a strange case of amnesia.

SECKATARY HAWKINS AND HIS FAIR and SQUARE CLUB

THE DESERTED CABIN.

Club promised Judge Granbery to stop Stapoulos and his crew of bad boys. While searching for Stapoulos the boys learn that old Judge Granbery is in the "old sun dial." They discover the stones on which were printed the hour numbers of the sun dial, and under the six stones they find a tin box filled with gold bonds stolen by Gray Harry's brother years ago. They give the bonds to old Judge Granbery, who returns them to Judge Granbery, their original owner. In the meantime Bullen, who has his headquarters in Hawkins' cabin in the Pelham ridge, succeeds in getting all of Stapoulos' boys away from him. Seck and his pals visit Bullen, later Stapoulos arrive and find the tin box. Hawkins tells them about finding the tin box, he wonders why they seem so glad to know that it contained only gold bonds. Hawkins tells Stapoulos to go back home, and they will not turn him over to Judge Granbery. They have "stopped Stapoulos."

DOCTOR WATERS was waiting for me when I arrived at the clubhouse today after school. We went back into my little writing room, and Doc pulled up a chair close to my desk.

"Well, Hawkins," he said, "that was a nice little bit of detective work you did for Judge Granbery the last few days."

"What do you mean?" I asked, as I opened my book and pulled the stopper out of my new bottle of ink.

"Don't act as if you didn't know!" exclaimed Doc, as he laid his hand on my arm and gave me a gentle squeeze. "I'm proud of you, Seck! You've certainly kept this little bunch of kids up to their marks, and they were genuine junior police, too. You did what you promised Judge Granbery—you 'stopped Stapoulos,' and what's more, you found back a lot of gold bonds that were stolen from the old judge's safety box years ago. He'd given them up as lost for good. And to see them returned—and to find out how you found them—"

"Oh, that!" I exclaimed. "That was nothing, Doc. It was very simple—"

"For you, perhaps, Hawkins; yes, it may have been simple; but the way you figured out the mystery of the old sun dial, and what's even more difficult to my mind, locating it—"

"I didn't do that, Doc," I broke in. "It was Shadow Loomis who found the sun dial—"

"Yes, after you had given him all the clues. But never mind, Seck. That's not what I came to talk about. I didn't want to give you a lot of praise and make you feel proud of what you've done. It's something more."

"Something more? What else, Doc?"

"You let Stapoulos go—when you could have captured him, Hawkins."

"Yes, I know I did, Doc. But what would you have me do? What would you have done, in the same kind of a situation?"

"The judge was rather peeved about that part of it. He praised you for solving the secret of the sun dial, and was grateful for the return of his lost bonds. But when I told him how you had Stapoulos in your hands, and then let him go—well, he questioned the wisdom of it. Said junior police should not be so big-hearted—"

"Big-hearted?" I interrupted. "So he thinks it was that, does he? Well, you tell him this, Doc. You tell him that I know we had Stapoulos standing alone, all his pals deserted him and went over to Bullen. I let Bullen use the cabin which you deeded to me over on the Pelham ridge. It was over in that cabin that I was talking to Bullen and his bullies, most of them deserters from Stapoulos' gang—it was then that Stapoulos and Carrigan came. And Carrigan deserted him right then and there—before our very faces—and—well, I felt kind of sorry for poor old Stapoulos. I thought of how badly I would feel, if the last fellow I had in my club deserted me, right in front of my worst enemy. Yeah, I admit I felt—"

"Same old soft-hearted Hawkins!"

"Call it soft-hearted if you like," I said. "That would be a good excuse for me to hide under, if I wanted to hide something. But I don't, Doc. I want to tell you the straight truth—it wasn't that soft-heartedness that made me let Stapoulos go—it was fear, I think—"

"What!" cried Doc. "Not you, Hawkins?"

"Of course," I said. "There we stood—us boys of the Fair and Square Club, numbering nine members, most of whom were outside the door. Inside, behind Bullen, were 20 boys. When Carrigan came and deserted, there were 21. Each and every one of those boys had once upon a time been friends of Stapoulos. Should we try to take Stapoulos a prisoner, then? If we had tried it, every one of those former mates of his would have attacked us. Don't ask me why, Doc—I just know boys, that's all. I knew they didn't want Stapoulos any longer. But I knew that they didn't want anybody else to jump on him, either. And so I took the easiest way out, thinking to avoid any trouble between Bullen's fellows and our club. At any rate, I stopped Stapoulos from making any further trouble down here on the old river bank—he went back to Watertown, they tell me—"

"The police want him, there!" snapped Doc. "Too bad! Just a kid—and the police want 'im!"

"Let them take him, if they can," I said. "They will be better men than they were before he got away from them. He's too clever—yet, some day, he will come to the end of his string—"

"They say he is a very smart boy," said Doc. "An inventor, sort of—"

"No, I understand Bullen did the inventing, at least he gets credit for it—"

"As though he shouldn't, you mean?" asked Doc.

"I don't know, but I think Hare is the smart boy in the crowd—Riffle Hare. I mean—I think you know him—"

"Yes, know his daddy, too. His daddy's a very successful mechanical engineer—"

"So Riffle is going to be, too, some day, Doc. They've got some kind of a secret between them—this Bullen and Riffle Hare. In fact, I think they must have several secrets. They've been very careful not to let us find out anything—"

"Well, I can see that you and your club must will be quite busy, then," said Doc with a laugh. "You'll solve the mystery of those secrets, or I'm badly mistaken. But Hawkins, perhaps there is one mystery that you've overlooked—"

"Which one?" I asked, quickly. "About the sun dial—the little old tin box that was hidden under the sun dial's sixth-hour stone—"

"The one with the bonds stolen from Judge Granbery—"

"Yes, it seems strange to me, somehow, that those two boys, Bullen and Stapoulos, were searching so frantically for that box. I suppose it is lucky that neither one found it. But from your report of the whole affair to Judge Granbery, and which the judge let me read, it seems that the finding of the box by you was a disappointment to one lad, and over in that cabin that I was talking to Bullen and his bullies, most of them deserters from Stapoulos' gang—it was then that Stapoulos and Carrigan came. And Carrigan deserted him right then and there—before our very faces—and—well, I felt kind of sorry for poor old Stapoulos. I thought of how badly I would feel, if the last fellow I had in my club deserted me, right in front of my worst enemy. Yeah, I admit I felt—"

"Don't ask too much of me, Doc. I don't explain it. But I can try, at least. Stapoulos was very much disappointed at the news that I had beaten him and Bullen to the sun dial and the tin box of bonds. He never got over that disappointment. Bullen was disappointed, too, when he heard that we boys had found the box. But just as soon as I told him the box contained nothing but gold bonds—"

"What?"

"I mean just what I say, Hawkins. I rode over to the Pelham ridge this morning. Your cabin is deserted—"

"Maybe they were just gone for the time," I broke in. "Maybe if you'd go back there tomorrow you'd find them—"

Doc laughed as he got up. "No, no, Hawkins," he said. "It's quite obvious that Bullen has left you flat. I suggest that you take a ride over to the cabin and see for yourself—"

As soon as the meeting was over I hurried to Dobe's barn, saddled my pony, and rode over to the Pelham ridge. I was impatient with Winner, my pony, for he seemed so slow to me on that ride, and yet I knew he was the swiftest pony and the most patient in the stables. I did not wait to hitch Winner, I just threw the lines over his head and leaped off and ran up to the cabin—

The door stood wide open. There was a key in the lock—the new lock that Bullen had put on it—and I rushed inside. On an upturned nail-peg lay a big sheet of black paper—tattered roofing paper—on which, in white chalk, were these words:

Seckatary Hawkins:

"Thanks for use of cabin. Would stay longer, but have better place to hide from you. You would only interfere. I could see it in your eye, that day you let Stapoulos go. You didn't want him. It was me you were after. But you'll never get me. Don't try."

"BULLEN."

I heard a step on the path outside. I turned quickly to see coming into the cabin—who? Carrigan! Yes, the one who stood by Stapoulos until the very last, and who deserted him at the very moment when Stapoulos needed him most.

"Carrigan!" I exclaimed. The words slipped from my lips involuntarily.

"Yes," he said. "I came back. I didn't expect to find anyone here. I had to come back."

"Had to come back?" I repeated, puzzled.

"Yes, to the place where I betrayed him—"

"What do you mean?" I demanded, my voice growing harsh. "Betrayed him? Who? If you mean Stapoulos—"

"Yes, I do mean Stapoulos. He was a good friend to me, Hawkins, and now—the police got him—to-day!"

"The police!" I whispered. "To-day! They got Stapoulos?"

"I just heard it—a half-hour ago. They got him. And it's all my fault. If I had stayed with him, perhaps—perhaps I could have saved him—he wasn't a bad boy. That shouldn't make us melancholy. As one of the great poets said, 'Some days must be dark and dreary.' We must be satisfied with half and half—we must take the rain with the sunshine, for too much of either would not be good for us. 'April showers bring May flowers,' you know. And don't forget that every cloud has a silver lining. After the rain we en-bringing Longlegs down here, see if they don't. You'd better keep your eyes open for him."

Which we did.

(Copyright, 1933, by Robert F. Schullers.)

Dear Pen Pals:

Your letters are getting more interesting each week, and I just wish it were possible to print every one, but we've got to be reasonable, for that is part of our motto, "Fair and Square." We have only a limited space, and we must do the best we can with what we have. That is always a good thing to say to yourself. Don't say, "I haven't enough tools to work with." Make the best you can with what you have.

One thing that seems to be growing with our club membership is the realization that it pays to be cheerful at all times. The fellow who can be as cheerful on a rainy day as he can on a bright, happy, sunny day is a fellow that everybody likes to have around. It's always good weather when good fellows get together.

Next Saturday begins the month of April, always called the rainy month. Boys and girls don't like rainy days, as a rule, because they are obliged to stay indoors. But that shouldn't make us melancholy. As one of the great poets said, "Some days must be dark and dreary." We must be satisfied with half and half—we must take the rain with the sunshine, for too much of either would not be good for us. "April showers bring May flowers," you know. And don't forget that every cloud has a silver lining. After the rain we enjoy the beauties and the blessings that it brings.

Think that over, and then sit down and write me a letter. And I'll wager that you won't find letter writing difficult. It will flow easily from your pen. And each succeeding letter that you write will add just that much experience to your store, so that some day—who knows?—you might become a famous writer. Now let us call our meeting to order and present the lucky pen pal who wins a book this week. Here is a letter from a Massachusetts pen pal, and I'm sure his branch club is going to be a credit to our Fair and Square Club:

Dear Seck:

Our branch club started off this week with a bang! All the boys were delighted with their pins and lucky coins. I asked them if they would like to get all of your ten books for our club. They all said they would, and they promised that they would write interesting letters to you about our club.

Gordon Bassett is the youngest member of our club, being only ten years old. Doug and I are both 12 and Bill is 11. This is my first letter to try and win one of your books. I could keep on writing to you forever.

Yours, fair and square,

ROBERT DAVIDSON, 12, 200 Walnut St., Newtonville, Mass.

And that brings us to the end of our page again, so we will adjourn until next week, same time, same page. Saturday being the first of April, I am reminding you once again to WATCH YOUR STEP and don't be April-fooled. Bye, till next week.

Yours, fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

Dear Seck:

I have never written to you before, but from now on I will write you often and some time I may win a book. If I don't succeed I will always remember your motto, "A quitter never wins, and a winner never quits."

I am 12 years old and in the eighth grade at school. I have missed a day at school this term and hope to miss no more.

I sure do get a thrill reading of your wonderful adventures in both the daily and Sunday papers. I know you will always win in the end, if you stand by your slogan, "Fair and Square."

Yours, fair and square,

DAISY SCOTT, Hollywood, Ga., Box 64.

Dear Seck:

It is good to write to you in spare time. I have not missed a day at school this year, or a day at Sunday school in about 17 months. My Sunday school teacher gave me a Bible for not missing a Sunday in the first year. I started at 2 P. M. and have not missed a Sunday night yet. I'll try to go every Sunday. I still read my Bible and still think about you. I am writing for the pleasure. My motto is still a winner never quits, a quitter never wins."

Yours, fair and square,

JOSEPH ADAMS, 10, Morrow, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am a girl 11 years old and in the sixth grade at school.

Seck, I noticed you mentioned story and poem writing. I have already written a few stories. My great ambition is to become a writer.

The weather here is not very warm although the sun is shining. I am afraid it will be a little hard to wait for summer and the swimming pool. A new member, fair and square, HELEN LOUISE SMITH, Johnson City, Tenn.

Hello Seck:

I, Bessie, am 5 feet tall and weigh 105 pounds. I have dark hair and fair complexion with blue eyes.

I, Ada, am 5 feet 8 inches tall. I weigh 130 pounds. I have red hair and fair complexion, with brown eyes.

See, Seck, we sure would like to come down to the old river bank and see you.

Dear Seck:

I am a little girl 12 years old and am in the sixth grade. My little sister and I have got the whooping cough and we have to stay at home from school. So we all get lonesome. I am trying to get a book to read.

This month of March seems to be a good-look month for our family. Saturday, March 11, was my baby sister's birthday and Wednesday, the 15th, is another sister's birthday.

I live on a farm. We have four pets one calf named Ben, one dog named King and four cats. Blackie, Sunshine, White and Snowwhite are their names. We also have four little pigs and 17 little chickens.

I like your motto, fair and square, and I try to be in every thing.

What Is Justice in This Case?

By PETER LEVINS.

WHEN you have read this narrative you will remark how infinitely varied can be the entanglements in the wake of a violent death. Given a few characters, and certain motivating forces, fate (with some assistance from an ingenious mind) can produce dramas so intricate in their pattern that frequently one feels that here is something which has never happened before. One cannot help but stand amazed at the endless variety of mystery.

As usual in mysteries, we will start with the finding of the body on a freezing night about a month ago.

John Hoppel Jr., a farmhand, returning home from a visit to a neighboring town, came upon the corpse in the road three miles south of Slinger. The body lay face upward on the shoulder of the road, with the head toward the road. The man had been killed by a single .30 caliber bullet which entered the right side of the head and went downward, shattering the bone of the skull as it passed through. No gun was to be found.

Hoppel discovered the body shortly after midnight, Friday, January 26. Before long police officers were on the scene, a lonely lane which branches off to a main highway. (Slinger, a popular summer resort, is about 25 miles northwest of Milwaukee.) The officers made a thorough search of the dead man's clothes, and of the ground where he lay.

The victim was expensively dressed in a brown suit, shoes and overcoat. The hat, found ten feet from the body, showed powder burns on the right side at the bottom of the rim. The man had on his left glove; the right one had been removed. His clothing was in perfect order, even to his muffler. Three keys, twenty-one cents in cash and a Chinese coin were found in the pockets. Nothing else.

A bruise on the victim's head led investigators to believe at first that he had been slugged. Later, Dr. E. L. Tharinger, pathologist, reported that it was a superficial abrasion. He could not say whether the bruise was inflicted before or after death.

Death had occurred about six hours before the body was discovered. It had occurred somewhere else, the detectives decided, for there was no trace of dirt on his shoes. This was further indicated by the amount of blood that had soaked into the ground. Apparently he had been killed in an automobile and then been carried out and placed in the road.

For two days, officials of two counties groped their way through the tangle of circumstances. Then, Saturday afternoon, came a break. Three residents of Slinger declared they had seen Oswald, with a ragged companion, in the bar of Roth hotel in Slinger, between 5 and 6 o'clock the day of the slaying. This stranger was described as having dark hair and bad teeth, and wearing a brown leather zipper jacket and dirty cap.

By Sunday night, the investigation produced grim evidence involving Erwin Marquardt, the real estate man's confidant and bookkeeper for the State Finance Loan and Securities Company of which Oswald was president.

Two surprise witnesses positively identified the stocky, sandy-haired Marquardt as the man who visited with Oswald their diminutive, gray-haired roadhouse in Pleasant Hill, a few miles from Slinger, on Thursday afternoon.

The bookkeeper previously informed police that Oswald had telephoned him from outside the office the day of the tragedy and asked him to bring $15 to him at N. 23d and W. Center streets, a small business district on the west side of Milwaukee and a few blocks north of the loan company. This was not unusual, Marquardt said, since Oswald had kept away from the office since Tuesday, preferring not to interview people who came to see him.

The bookkeeper said he borrowed a car and met his employer at the designated intersection. According to Marquardt, Oswald said: "Jump in my car. I don't want any one to see you talking with me here."

They drove into a side street, the money was turned over and a few minutes later, around 10 o'clock, Oswald drove off in his Hudson coach on the "death journey."

Marquardt returned to the office and gave police a perfect alibi of having dinner on Thursday night with a young woman friend and later calling for her brother, a policeman, who was attending a lodge meeting.

Marquardt said that Oswald had told him he was trying to raise $10,000, because he had notes for $88,000 coming due Friday. He also revealed that the loan company was in grave financial difficulty and that doctoring of the books went as far back as 1925, all of the entries being dictated by Oswald, according to Marquardt.

Oswald carried $126,000 in life insurance, against which he had borrowed heavily. On Monday morning police announced that they had rejected the identification of Marquardt by the owners of the Pleasant Hill roadhouse and an intensive search was started for the "ragged stranger," who was known to be the companion of Oswald on his death ride.

On Tuesday morning came a startling development indeed.

Joseph J. Pielmeier, an unemployed Milwaukee house-painter, and once sentenced automobile thief, surrendered himself to District Attorney Zabel, declaring that he was the man who was with Oswald when the loan executive, desperate over threatening exposure of his financial operations, shot himself.

Pielmeier said that Oswald killed himself as the climax to an afternoon spent drinking and eating in various roadhouses in the vicinity of the death-spot.

Developments in the strange case came with kaleidoscopic rapidity from the moment Pielmeier made his dramatic appearance in the district attorney's office. At the same moment he was unburdening his soul of his tragic secret, Harry Loubenheimer, a rural mail carrier, was discovering the gun in an open field about 300 yards from the place where Oswald's body was found. A heavy string was attached to the gun, which Pielmeier said had been tied to the door handle of the Hudson coach.

The painter said he worked as a truck driver for Oswald some years ago, when the latter was proprietor of the Wisconsin Sausage Company. He said that on the Tuesday night before the body was found the real estate man came to his home, a modest cottage on N. 29th street, and invited him to go out and have some drinks. Which he did.

The following day, he said, Oswald came to his home and they had a short conversation in which

AUNT HET

BY ROBERT QUILLEN.

"I DON'T blame folks for lovin' money. It may be the root of all evil, but nobody notices the evil if the pile of money is big enough."

"So far as I know, money is the only thing that makes the world treat a rebuilt little half-wit like Nell as if she invented the D. A. R. and sat in the same chair with Dorothy Gann.

"I went shoppin' with her twice an' the clerks skidded around the corners tryin' to get to her. They squirmed around her till they got in her hair gushin' an' coo'n' like she was a new baby, an' I couldn't get waited on till I stood in the middle of the floor and throwed back my head and howled for service."

"That's what money does for you. It makes you the stuffin' in the turkey instead of somethin' the cat dragged in."

"You can talk about the virtue o' bein' humble, but all of us like to be noticed personal instead o' bein' glanced over like we was part o' the furniture, an' even in these times you're just part of the population if you ain't got a wad."

"I reckon it's wicked, but I get tired o' bein' treated like $8.00 while the world skins its knees to win the favor o' dumb and useless females, that married money."

GOITRE NOT A DISEASE

Milwaukee, Wis.—It has been brought to light by scientific research that goitre is not a disease and is not to be treated as such. Dr. A. A. Rook, Dept. 251 Box 737, Milwaukee, Wis., a prominent goitre specialist for over 30 years has perfected a different method of treatment which has proven highly successful. He is opposed to needless operations. Dr. Rook has published a copyrighted book at his own expense which tells about goitre and this treatment. He will send this book free to anyone interested. Write him today.

Oswald, he said, arrived promptly then said he had some business and would be back within an hour. It was during this time, officials thought, that Oswald met Marquardt and obtained the $15.

Pielmeier said that the real estate man suggested that they take a ride and talk about "that job." And so they started on the ride. The ex-convict stated that Oswald didn't say anything about killing himself until the last minute.

"We drove to Pleasant Hill and Slinger," he said. "We were drinking during the day. There were five whisky bottles in the car. When we left Slinger around 6 o'clock, Oswald drove straight ahead on the dirt road instead of turning into the highway. I thought he wanted to take another drink."

"It was getting late then and I told him I ought to get home . . . that my wife would be worried about me."

"All right," he said, and turned the car around on the dirt road, then stopped and said, 'Joe, I can't go on with this any longer. I'm in the worst kind of a hole with my company. I owe a lot of money today and can't pay it. I'm going to blow my brains out and I've got the gun to do it.'"

The painter said Oswald showed him an automatic, tied to the right door of the car with a piece of heavy twine. He did not explain how it happened that he took no notice of the gun before, despite the fact he sat on that side of the car. Part of the twine was still attached to the window lift of the abandoned car when it was found.

"I said to him, 'Gee, don't do that. Think of your wife and the kid,' the painter went on. "He said, 'That's what I am thinking of. It's the only way they'll have to live.'"

"Then he got out of the car, took the gun and began clicking it. He clicked it twice and it didn't go off. Then he fired two bullets into the ground."

He asserted he did not look to see whether Oswald was dead. He hauled in the gun by the string and drove about 700 feet, where he hurled the weapon into a field. After driving another 800 feet to the east he threw out the wallet which, he claimed, Oswald had tossed into the car just before he shot himself.

Then he drove to Milwaukee and abandoned the car, where it was found by police the next morning, about a mile from the Pielmeier home.

After Pielmeier spent Tuesday night in jail, his first words the following morning were: "That was the first good night's sleep I've had since Mr. Oswald shot himself. He certainly put me in an awful jam. I'm glad I got it off my mind, no matter what happens."

Following two days of intensive inquiry by Milwaukee and Washington county authorities, Pielmeier was released "on parole" Thursday noon (February 23), and brought to Milwaukee, where he was taken to the Oswald home to face the comely widow, whom he had never met.

Mrs. Laura Oswald, emerging from seclusion for the first time since her collapse at her husband's funeral, faced Pielmeier in a dramatic scene and cried:

"I think you murdered my husband! Why didn't you take the gun away from him? Why didn't you stop him? Why didn't you lift up his body and go somewhere for help? How did you know he was dead? Why did you leave him lying on the road? It doesn't sound right . . . any of it."

She told of 20 years of happy married life with Oswald and that nothing he had ever said or done could possibly point to suicide. Her story of her husband's movements the Tuesday night before his death agreed with that told by Pielmeier, in that she admitted he was absent from home about four hours.

According to the painter, this was the night on which Oswald visited him and suggested they go for drinks.

Here Mrs. Oswald astounded her listeners by declaring that she had been with her husband every moment during that last night. She claimed that they went to a soft drink establishment for beer and shrimp and then returned home. However, the proprietor of this place denied that the couple had been there; in fact, that Oswald had not visited his establishment in more than a year.

After Pielmeier's release the case was at a standstill until Monday, February 6, ten days after Oswald's body had been found, when, after an hour's deliberation, the coroner's jury of Washington county reversed its original finding, in which it held that Oswald came to death "at the hands of a person or persons unknown," and brought in a verdict asserting that Oswald discharged the gun that caused his death.

Dr. E. F. Bartt, Milwaukee pathologist, was the only witness called. He stated that he found gunpowder imbedded in Oswald's skull tissues, indicating the fatal shot had been fired with the pistol pressed tightly to his head and pointing strongly in the direction of suicide. Also, that the scalp wound was most probably caused when Oswald fell by the roadside after firing the fatal shot.

As far as the state of Wisconsin is concerned, the Oswald mystery has been cleared as a suicide, but the widow is still convinced that her husband was murdered and has started a private investigation into his death.

Confronted by mortgages and bank debts equal or greater than the possible amount of life insurance she may receive, Mrs. Oswald is faced with the prospect of being penniless when final settlements are made. Garnishments seeking to restrain payment to her of life insurance policies totaling $126,000 in five companies have been served by the Marshall & Isley bank, which claims Oswald owes it $60,000 on behalf of his loan company.

Had Oswald not died when he did, it is known that he would have faced arrest for an asserted defalcation.

Mrs. Oswald, through her attorney, has filed suit for $10,000 against the Old Line Life Insurance Company to collect the double indemnity on a $10,000 policy. With the verdict of the jury, suicide, it is doubtful whether she will be able to collect until she proves that her husband was murdered.

There are still several points, which, if cleared up, might throw a new light on the case.

1. If Oswald stepped from the car to the three-inch muddy clay of the road before firing "himself," how did it happen that no mud was found on his shoes when the body was discovered?

2. If Oswald killed himself on the road what was an empty shell doing in his abandoned automobile, if the shots were fired outside of the car and if the gun was thrown away, as Pielmeier says it was?

3. How did Oswald receive the blow on the head, it being impossible to establish definitely whether it occurred before or after death?

4. What happened to the $15 Oswald borrowed from his bookkeeper that morning? Only a few cents was found on the body. Is it possible that Oswald spent $15 in cheap roadhouses on food and drink that fatal day?

THE FOUR-FIVE NOTRUMP CONVENTION

BY ELY CULBERTSON.

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

THE new Four-Five Notrump Convention is attaining great popularity among the Bridge players of the country. Like most good things, however, it runs the risk of being overemphasized. The mere fact that a certain minimum holding is required for this bid does not mean that the bid should be made each time the requirement is held. Unless this point is seriously considered, many games will be lost through overbidding.

The following is probably the best example of this. A certain player writes to know whether the four notrump bid is justified, holding:

Spades 8 6

Hearts K 9 7 5 4

Diamonds A 7 5

Clubs A 9 4

Having opened the bidding with a heart and his partner having responded with two spades, this player wants to bid four notrump either immediately or at some future date to show his partner two Aces and the King of a bid suit. Obviously this is insane, as the opening bid was a bedrock minimum and at no time should he do more than try to sign his partner off. The mere fact that the four notrump bid is forcing, immediately places the bidding at a slam range even if the slam itself is eventually not reached, and, consequently, a contract of five must be certain before the bid is made.

Of course, the above hand is in the nature of a joke, but the fact that even one player out of millions brings this point up necessitates the comment. The four notrump bid should not be made unless a player is reasonably certain that the combined hands will produce a slam. As a matter of fact, with any borderline hand some other bid should generally be preferred, as partner will invariably get the inference that a slam is makable or at least worthy of attempt even if he lacks the required number of Aces.

There is no doubt, however, that this bid is invaluable in reaching Grand Slams. Before presenting it to the public it was tried in the fires of experience by many of the master players of the country and was only presented when it appeared to have covered most of the salient difficulties of Grand Slam bidding as a whole.

One typical example occurs to me in which a player decided to deviate slightly from the established convention in order to give his partner invaluable information. While deviations are not generally recommended, in this particular case they proved extremely valuable.

♠ Q J
 ♥ A 7 6
 ♦ K Q 4 3
 ♠ A K 10 8 7 6 5
 ♥ A 8
 ♦ 8 7 4

South	North
1♠	3♠
Pass

Mr. R. H. Richardson, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was sitting North and Mr. James J. Kennedy Jr., also of Brooklyn, was sitting South. Mr. Richardson was confronted with a rather unusual situation of hearing his partner make an impossible bid. His partner happened to be a player whom he trusted, however, and so his deduction was more or less automatic. Holding the Queen-Knave of spades himself, he realized that his partner's suit could not be of the almost-solid nature, such as A K J 10 x x, A Q J 10 x x, A K Q x x. It followed, therefore, that there must be some additional feature of the suit which called for the bid. Mr. Richardson correctly estimated that it showed a 7-card suite headed by the Ace-King. That was not the end of his deductions, however. Since the bid was unorthodox, it could not have been made without the additional holding of the Ace of diamonds. Consequently, Mr. Richardson counted 7 spade tricks, 3 diamond tricks, 1 heart trick and 2 club tricks as certain winners. He could have employed the Four-Five Notrump Convention but refrained from doing so because of his implicit confidence in his own reasoning powers. A four notrump bid would merely produce a five notrump bid from his partner—bidding which he felt was unnecessary in view of the circumstances. To be frank about it, he was probably loath to put his own reasoning to the test and decided in favor of the immediate Grand Slam rather than the "Approach" Grand Slam, only to show his confidence in himself—which, to put it mildly, is exemplary reasoning. I would hardly go so far as to recommend this procedure to players who do not equal Mr. Richardson in caliber.

SOLUTION OF LAST WEEK'S PROBLEM.

North	South
1♠	1♥
2NT	3NT
Pass

Give the distribution, as closely as possible, of the North and South hands.

Answer: The North hand obviously contains five diamonds and four spades and a maximum of two hearts, as, after South rebids hearts, North will support hearts rather than bid two notrump if he holds as much as three. The probability is that he has a singleton heart and three clubs, as he must have a club stopper. However, 5-4-2-2-3 may also be correct. North definitely cannot be void of hearts, as then the two no-trump bid is absolutely incorrect. The South hand probably contains six hearts, two or three spades, probably only two diamonds and the remainder in clubs.

THIS WEEK'S PROBLEM. Each Sunday I am giving a problem in bidding. Today's problem is No. 11 of the series. The answer to today's problem will be given next Sunday.

You hold:

Spades A J 8 2
 Hearts 3
 Diamonds K Q 8 5
 Clubs Q J 10 4

Neither side is vulnerable. Your partner bid: one heart and Second Hand passes. What do you bid?

NEW NOTES FOR SPRING

Beauty of Detail and Flattering Collar

CHIC AND YOUTHFUL

At the left; a white crepe frock, printed with a narrow black broken line has a flattering fan-shaped frill of white organdie on the blouse and pleated insets on the sleeves. Black crinkly crepe is used for the dress with the huge bow collar and cuffs of mousseline. It features self-covered buttons, and displays a wide black suede belt. Sleeves are cut in-one with the bodice.

THE BROWN ENSEMBLE

At the right; note the cape jacket, tucked blouse of white batiste that buttons down the front, and the wide belt of brown crepe with self-covered buckle. A huge ruff collar of white mousseline is the only trimming on the simple black crepe frock. The sleeves reveal a slight elbow fullness and the bodice blouses a bit above the narrow tie girdle. Tiny tucks accentuate the shoulder line. Two-tones of green are used for the short-sleeved printed jacket frock with a youthful round neckline and sash of lighter green.

TO COMPLETE THE ENSEMBLE

IMAGINATION

BOTH of these qualities are displayed in the millinery offerings of the moment. At the left, you see a charming new turban of ribbed silk ribbon revealing the new high-peaked crown that is achieved by folds of the fabric.

FLATTERING

A RUFF of white organdie encircles the neck and continues to the waistline on the navy blue crepe frock above. Otherwise, the dress is extremely simple, having rather full three-quarter sleeves and a straight skirt silhouette. The narrow belt boasts a white buckle.

ACCESSORIES

ABOVE, a trim, lizard t-strap, open-shank sandal in gray, and a bag of black calf with a silver metal mounting whose looks are deceiving. Though it appears to be very flat, it proves to be most commodious. And the white do-skin gloves reveal a clever tucked design on the cuffs.

A FROCK OF REFINEMENT

GRAY triple sheer is the chosen material for the frock at the extreme left. The collar and sleeve treatments are of white organdie. Note that the collar is double, with the white revers just a bit smaller than the gray, and the blouse seaming repeats the collar shape. The red and white printed frock in the center has a full-length blue silk coat lined with the print. Elbow-length cape sleeves reveal the long, tight sleeves of the dress. Since the coat is collarless, the revers collar of the frock is worn on the outside. Next, the very Spring-like printed frock shows a green leaf design on a greige background. The dress is one-piece and cut with a surplice collar and sash of plain greige. Four pleated insets dress up the straight skirt.

The Forgraves
Case

Next Sunday Wm. Henry Wisner presents the case of rich Uncle Ezra, eccentric bachelor who is shot to death in his study. Who is guilty? Try your powers of deduction on this strange enigma.

Tarzan

by EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

THE EGYPTIAN PRINCESS

BLESSED BY THE HIGH PRIEST, THE PRINCESS NIKOTRIS SET OUT UPON HER JOURNEY TO BRING TARZAN BACK TO THE DESOLATED LAND.

HER BARGE WAS BROUGHT TO THE EDGE OF THE JUNGLE IN THE RIVER WHERE THE CROCODILES SWARMED. THERE SHE DISMISSED HER ATTENDANTS AND ENTERED INTO THE WILDS, ACCOMPANIED ONLY BY HER BROTHER, TUTAMKEN, AS GUIDE, AND BY ERICH VON HARBEN AS INTERPRETER.

THE JOURNEY WAS LONG AND THE DELICATE LADY, UNUSED TO THE WILDS, GREW ALMOST TOO WEARY TO GO ON.

PRESENTLY HER BROTHER HAD TO CARRY HER.

HIGH IN A TREE, PTOK, THE GREAT APE, WATCHED, HATRED OF THE TARMANGANI IN HIS HEART.

SWIFT WAS HIS ATTACK. LEAPING FROM THE TREES, HE LANDED UPON VON HARBEN AND KNOCKED HIM SENSELESS.

THEN, WITH FEROCIOUS STRENGTH, HE FELLED TUTAMKEN, AND WRENCHED NIKOTRIS FROM HER BROTHER'S GRASP.

IN HIS ARMS HE LIFTED THE PRINCESS.

HIGH INTO THE TREES HE CARRIED HER.

DEEP IN THE JUNGLE TARZAN HEARD THE WOMAN'S BLOOD-CHILLING, FRENZIED SCREAMS!

AND THEN THE MORE TERRIBLE CRY OF THE "GREAT APE, AS THE WOMAN FAINTED IN HIS ARMS"

BARGAIN HUNTERS—A section of the line composed of thousands of auto owners who stormed the state capitol to take advantage of the $3 tag sale ordered by Governor Talmadge. The line extended for several blocks. (George Cornett.)
